The Solid Gold Dinner.
More Hangings Urged.
Presidential Fishing.
Jefferson Would Wonder.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MRS. ELBERT H. GARY, widow of the late Judge Gary, head of United States Steel, is dead, and friends that knew her hospitality while she lived hear the news with sincere regret. She was an intelligent woman, a friendly hostess, and made her husband, double her age, happy to the day of his death. That is a good record.

Also, she gave an interesting dinner, with the "gold plate" for Queen Marie, of Roumania. The gold plate, forks, knives, plates, enormous champagne goblets, everything made of solid gold, was said to have cost $500,000. It probably cost half that.

On the night of the Queen Marie-Gary dinner, a small table for eight, WITH the gold plate, was spread on the first floor up. Arthur Williams, then head of the New York Edison Company, said:

"Just lift one of those champagne goblets. It must weigh two pounds."

It did.

THE QUEEN'S party of six was to dine at the small table, with the solid gold, and she was to select any two she liked to sit on either side of her. She asked W. R. Hearst to sit on her right, and another newspaper man to sit on her left, proving herself an intelligent queen. She was here to gather information.

H. L. MENCKEN, after fifty days in foreign parts, furnishes copy, well condensed.

"In Illinois, a murderer after conviction has a 25 to 1 chance he won't be hanged. In England, it is 25 to 1 he will be."

If Mr. Insull were in his native England, says Mencken:

"He would be picking oakum now. If he had escaped to Greece, the British would have gone after him with a club, and told the Greeks we are taking him back, and leaving at seven o'clock tonight."

Mr. Mencken thinks:

"If we get Insull back, it will take five years to get him behind bars. He'll go to jail with a blonde stenographer, a radio, a stock ticker and his own private jazz band. And then he won't stick."

MR. MENCKEN thinks we need more hangings in America.

"Imagine the imbecility of sending a man like Machine Gun Kelly to prison for life. Hang him and have done with it."

Furthermore, he wonders "what President Roosevelt is going to do next year when the bills start coming in." The answer to that is simple. The government will continue inflating with interest-bearing bonds, which is supposed to be conservative and wise, as compared with inflation with non-interesting bearing currency, although the bonds, with interest added, cost exactly double.

MR. MENCKEN does not expect Communism.

"I think we are headed for Fascism. Not the kind they have in Italy and Germany. It will be worse here, because the blackguards will be in the van. We are definitely headed for a man on horseback."

Mr. Mencken adds:

"I'm sorry about it."

He need not be. Sorrow should be saved for the "man on horseback." He will need sympathy.

THE PRESIDENT'S son, Elliott, returning from Vincent Astor's yacht, and from watching his father trying to catch fish, is reported to have said that his father is not the world's greatest fisherman.

The President, pretending to be highly indignant, suggests a "special committee to investigate and secure a retraction."

In ancient days, not to catch fish, kill the wild boar, or bring home the deer, was a disgrace. It meant letting your family go hungry. Not to catch fish now means that you are thinking about things more important than the biggest swordfish, sailfish, barracuda or devil fish ever dragged, fighting, from his own home.

THE PRESIDENT, with reports coming to him by radio from all over the country, including news that Republicans are coming out of their holes like groundhogs in spring, has things on his mind more important than watching his fish line.

If the President can hook a big fish called "permanent prosperity," the public will not ask him to be any other kind of Izaak Walton.

JEFFERSON DAY dinners and speeches are approaching. How time flies! Jefferson was born two hundred years ago, lacking nine years, and the greatest changes in American government have come in the last two of those "two hundred years." Barring the events of 1776.

It is as well for Jefferson's peace of mind that he cannot return and attend the celebrations in a country that now says, "the best government is that which governs the most," not the opposite.

WHEN THE first Soviet steamship, Kim, made fast to a Brooklyn dock in New York harbor, local Communists rushed eagerly aboard, arms widespread to embrace "comrades" from Russia. Reporters say the Russian comrades pushed them politely off the ship.

This proves, first, that the genuine Communist article from Russia takes little stock in the "small-time," or "bush league" Communist of other countries. It indicates also that, this coun-

McNair Dime Fails to Buy 'Number'

MAYOR FINDS ALL HE GOT WAS TIP

Newsie Not Booker, And Anyhow, 918 Wasn't 'Hot'

The Mayor intended to play 10 cents on the numbers today, but unknowingly spent his money futilely for advice from a "dope sheet."

The seer who writes the "dope sheet" told him 918 was a good number to play. It wasn't; and, anyhow, the Mayor wouldn't have cashed in if it had been.

The Mayor's intentions were to gamble on 918. It was his own fault, he said, when he fell for the "dope sheet" stuff, because William Barber, the one-armed Negro paper vendor at Fifth and Sixth avenues, had tried to explain he wasn't selling a lottery ticket.

It happened like this:

Mayor McNair stopped at Barber's newsstand, proffered Barber a dime, and asked for a good number. There lay the seer's advice printed on a card. The card, Barber and the Mayor agreed that 918 was a pretty good number.

The Mayor took the card. Fingering the dime, Barber said:

"Mister, I don't write numbers, but I'll tr yto get it placed for you if I can."

It wasn't until he got to his office that the Mayor learned he had bought only a "tip" and not a number. He said he was going out to see Barber about it today. He may want his dime back.

McNair said he wanted a number slip to present as evidence to a "committee of three editors and three clergymen" who should decide whether numbers ought to be sold at newsstands.

Her Trust Fund Safe

MARGARET LUELLA M'CREADY, 4 . . DADDY'S SUIT DISMISSED

Little Peggy McCready, whose father's suit to set aside the trust fund established in 1930 for her and her mother, his first wife, has been dismissed from the courts. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

TRUST FIGHT DISMISSED BY COURT

McCready Loses in Suit To Break Fund for Ex-Wife, Child

"Playboy" Harrison R. McCready today lost his battle to set aside the $150,000 trust fund which he had created for his first wife and child.

Judge Frank P. Patterson in Common Pleas Court handed down a decision dismissing McCready's suit.

McCready's attorney, Charles J. Margiotti, had argued that McCready was incompetent when he signed the trust in 1930.

On this point Judge Patterson's opinion said:

"At no time since the date of the trust agreement, September 10, 1930, until the filing of the suit was any question raised as to the validity of the trust agreement.

"During the intervening time the plaintiff had long periods of sobriety and was dealing with and disposing of real estate—and had otherwise conducted himself as a normal individual of ordinary firmness of mind and mental stability except at the time he gave himself over to the periods of intoxication, which periods have been in the last year more frequent than formerly."

The court termed McCready a "common drunkard," but said at the same time the "Playboy" was not a supine personality. The opinion said:

"Plaintiff is of robust physique, organically sound, with quick recuperating power from drunken debauchery and displaying normal reaction to the tests of reflexes that are part of expert examination for mental instability."

MRS. PINCHOT PLEADS FOR LABOR BILL

Governor's Wife Backs Wagner Program at Senate Hearing

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP.)—Approval of the Wagner bill to outlaw employer-dominated company unions was advocated today to the Senate Labor Committee by Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, red-haired, factory-picketing wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, dynamic red-headed wife of the Pennsylvania Governor, was given the right of way today to unfold her views on the Wagner Labor Board bill.

Advocates of the bill hoped for Mrs. Pinchot's support. Siding with the workers, she has been in the thick of union, strike and labor controversies in Pennsylvania.

In addition to creating a permanent National Labor Board, the Wagner bill would outlaw employer-dominated company unions.

The steel industry's attack on the bill ended yesterday as Nathan L. Miller, general counsel of the United States Steel Corporation, said it would tend to promote discord rather than industrial peace. Enactment, he added, "would set a decided brake on recovery forces."

Miller told the Senate Labor Committee that the recovery act's licensing section had had no effect in inducing industry's cooperation with NRA and labeled employe coercion by employers "on the whole a myth."

Miller followed delegates from employes' organizations of most of the large steel concerns, one of whom, representing Weirton Steel Company workers, said the American Federation of Labor and two of its affiliated unions were "rackets."

The delegates said they had obtained more benefits under existing collective bargaining plans than they could by affiliating with organized labor, and denied management attempts at domination of their activities.

MRS. ROBERT G. JOHNSON

INFANT HURT IN HOME BY DYNAMITE EXPLOSION

Union Picket Slugged; Pinchot Coal-Deputy Probe Balked

Homes were dynamited and stoned, revolver shots were fired and a miner was slugged as new disorders broke out in the Fayette County coal field today.

Gov. Pinchot's commission in Uniontown investigating employment of deputy sheriffs in labor disputes, meanwhile, postponed a hearing at which it was to hear witnesses today tell of past strife in the mine region.

Few of the mines were affected by a strike attributed by mine union officials to the fact that strikers in past disputes had not been rehired.

CENTER OF VIOLENCE

Most of the disorder this morning occurred at Smock, where the H. C. Frick Coke Company's Colonial No. 1 mine is located. As a result of a dynamite blast at Grindstone, a 14-month-old baby suffered convulsions and two young men were injured slightly.

The rear porch of the home of Alex Jones, a United Mine Worker at Smock, was smashed by a dynamite explosion, three homes at Smock were stoned, and Julius Phillips, 52, United Mine Worker, was struck on the head as he was on his way to the Colonial No. 1 picket line. His assailant was not identified.

BARRAGE OF BULLETS

Nearly two score shots were fired as six automobiles loaded with men sped through Smock.

Officials said the men in the automobiles apparently sought to intimidate the Smock miners. No one was hurt. The Smock mine was operating at about 75 per cent of normal today.

The explosion, which injured a baby, occurred near the home of Joe Daniero, who operates a store at Colonial No. 4. Fourteen windows in the house were broken. The injured child was Daniero's son, Frank. John Pelick and Albert Stock, who were near the building, were slightly hurt.

Pickets appeared at Colonial No. 4, at Grindstone, and the Smock workings, but officers kept them moving while many of the miners went into the pits unmolested.

The renewed strike activity in the field was attributed by mine union officials to the fact that followers of Marty Ryan, leader of a strike at Grindstone several months ago, have not been rehired at Grindstone.

William Hynes, president of District No. 4, United Mine Workers, said the strike was not authorized by the union.

PINCHOT PROBE BALKED

Gov. Pinchot's commission investigating the employment of deputy sheriffs was postponed indefinitely. Chairman Lewis said because H. C. Frick Coke Company officials and Sheriff Harry E. Hackney, of Fayette County, declined to appear at the hearings. Sheriff Hackney denied he had refused to co-operate and said he would issue a formal statement later.

LINE IN SHAKEUP FOR MAIL BIDS

Reorganization of Pennsylvania Airlines was planned today by its stockholders in order to bid for government air mail contracts.

Notice of intention to seek a certificate of incorporation for Pennsylvania Airlines and Transport Company was filed by Attorney George N. Monro, Jr. He said stockholders of Pennsylvania Airlines would own the stock of the new company.

The reorganization is necessary, Monro said, to comply with the government's requirements for bidding on mail contracts. The firm would not be eligible for a contract under the government ruling against companies that previously held contracts.

Monro explained that none of the officers of Pennsylvania Airlines will be connected with the new company in an official capacity. The notice of intention to file incorporation papers said they would be filed by Frank J. Chesterman, James W. Arrott, III., and Bertram H. Kenyon.

RELIEF ORDER THEFTS BARED

Federal postal authorities are investigating an outbreak of welfare order thefts in the Hill District, it developed today at a hearing in Central Police Court.

Numerous orders have disappeared from private mail boxes in the district during the past three months, Postoffice Inspector D. H. Stephens revealed at a hearing of Emory Castlederry, 40, Negro, of 1412 Whitcomb street.

Castlederry was arrested yesterday charge with taking welfare orders from mail boxes and disposing of them at reduced prices. He was held over pending further investigations at the request of Stephens.

Charles Hoober, Negro, of 1313 Wylie avenue, testified he saw Castledery selling orders in a restaurant and following a mailman from house to house.

Alvin Harris, Negro, of 60 Arthur street, said he understood he could buy a $1.50 welfare order for 75 cents from Castlederry. order was reduced from $8 to $4 weekly.

Referring to the effect of his ruling the Reno divorce invalid, the jurist said:

"We have been obliged to reach this conclusion with considerable reluctance, for its effect is to saddle the defendant with two wives; one lawfully married to him in Nevada and the other still undivorced from him so far as Pennsylvania is concerned.

"Our sympathy goes out to the defendant."

Senate Boosting Taxes Millions With Super-Levy

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP.)—The Senate brewed new headaches for the taxpayers today.

The tax bill, which was a $258,000,000 measure as it came from the House, already is up to a proposed $330,000,000 in the Senate, with a strong likelihood it will reach $480,000,000 before it is passed.

An amendment by Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, that would add an estimated $55,000,000, and one by Senator La Follette (Rep.), of Wisconsin, that would be good for perhaps $95,000,000 more, were given the approval today of Senator Harrison (Dem.), of Mississippi, who is in charge of the legislation.

Monday may see a vote. Both Senate and House were in recess today.

The bill as received from the House was boosted to $330,000,000 in the Senate Finance Committee before reaching the Senate floor.

Senator Couzens' proposal is for a 10 per cent super-levy, to be effective for one year only. The 10 per cent would be figured on the tax itself, a person whose tax came to $100, for example, adding 10 per cent of that and paying $110.

The La Follette amendment would boost the super estate or inheritance levies beyond the Finance Committee rates and cut down existing exemptions.

Both proposals are certain of Senate approval.

Letter Threatening Mayor Held Hoax

CLEVELAND, April 7.—(AP.)—A letter threatening death for Mayor Harry L. Davis and demanding $15,000, police decided today, was probably the work of a crank. Detectives disclosed the threat after two unsuccessful attempts to capture the writer of the note, which the Mayor received Thursday.

WAVE KILLS 40 AS ROCK FALLS

International News Service.

OSLO, April 7.—A freak "tidal wave," caused by the crashing of an enormous rock into the sea, took a toll of at least 40 lives in Norwegian fishing towns today in one of the strangest disasters in Norway's history.

The huge rock fell into the water with a thundering roar near Aalesund, Norway, causing three successive waves, which swept inland for a distance of more than 800 yards, wrecking fishing craft, waterfront structures and many homes while inhabitants were asleep in two small fishing towns, Tafjord and Fjordaa.

There were 22 known dead in Tafjord and 17 in Fjordaa. It was feared there might have been similar casualties in other towns of the vicinity, believed to have been struck also.

The great rock's fall was believed due to some sort of an earth rumbling.

Von Einem, Sponsor Of 'Big Bertha,' Dies

MUEHLHEIM-ON-THE-RUHR, Germany, April 7.—(INS.)—Gen. Karl von Einem, one of Germany's most famous military leaders and the man who introduced the 42-centimeter "Big Bertha" gun into World War fighting, died at his home today at the age of 81.

At the end of the war Gen. von Einem was commander of the German forces in the Champagne sector, between Argonne and Rheims, leading the fighting against the Americans until the armistice.

Sisters Robbed By Sneak Thieves

Thieves broke into the apartment of Ann Beckman and Florence Hennessy, sisters, at 5559 Hobart street, late yesterday, and stole jewelry and clothing valued at $500, they reported to police. Entrance was gained through the front door during their absence, police said.

Two squares away thieves stole clothing and jewels valued at $200 from the apartment of Mrs. C. L. Friedberg, 5735 Hobart street, last night.

Roosevelt Stops Fishing for Swim

MIAMI, Fla., April 7.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt took time off from fishing this morning for a swim in the waters off Anguila Island in the Bahaman group.

The presidential yacht anchored early today. Reports of good fishing and swimming were sent by Vincent Astor, owner of the yacht, to Marvin H. McIntyre, White House secretary here.

JOHNSON SILENT ON COAL MOVES

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP.)—Legal action and labor troubles arising from the recent amendment to the bituminous coal code establishing a seven-hour day and higher wages in the industry elicited no comment today from the National Recovery Administration.

Gen. Johnson's scheduled press conference was canceled at the last moment yesterday and the administrator could not be reached for comment on the developments in the coal situation. Other officials declined to make any statement.

In short, the administration maintained its previously announced policy of taking no action in the matter before the public hearing on the amendment Monday.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., April 7.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt was re-elected yesterday as senior warden of St. James' Episcopal Church. His son, James, was re-elected a vestryman.

Roosevelt Son Fights Newspaper Cameraman

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, April 7. — Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., who once tossed a bull in Spain, was in the day's news again today—this time for having tossed a newspaper cameraman.

The President's son, standing six feet four inches tall, proved his versatility as a football player, a boxer and a wrestler in an impromptu bout last night at the arena here. He stole the show from a wrestling match by sailing full steam into the newspaper photographer, Donald Corvelli.

The unscheduled clash between handsome young Roosevelt and Corvelli must be blamed on the cameraman's devotion to duty.

He believed it would make a grand picture for his paper if he could "shoot" the President's son in the usual pose he presented as he stood cheering for his favorite, Gus Sonnenberg, who happened to be wrestling with Ray Steele, in the ring.

But, Roosevelt, Jr., was of different mind. He didn't want to be "shot."

And so when the photographer displayed his temerity, the President's son brought Corvelli down with a flying tackle. A tangle of fists, elbows and feet ensued.

The President's son emerged victorious in the melee, but the photographer was not completely vanquished. Although his camera was demolished, he managed to save the plate reproducing young Roosevelt's likeness and today the picture, which engendered the hostilities, appeared in the newspaper

Reno Divorce Held Void, Phila. Man Has 2 Wives

PHILADELPHIA, April 7.—(AP.)—By a decision of Judge William M. Lewis in Domestic Relations Court, ruling Reno divorces "invalid" in Pennsylvania, Charles F. Newman today was "saddled with two wives."

Newman was a defendant in a complaint filed by his first wife, Margaret, who charged he failed to pay her support after remarrying in Nevada following his divorce there. Her claim for $3,066 back support was wiped out by the jurist's decision, and the support

NEW CITY BOND ISSUES GET MAYOR'S O. K.

'Great Secrecy' Marks Signing of Four Ordinances

With great secrecy and with requests several city officials to be silent on the subject, Mayor McNair has signed the four city bond ordinances against which he had protested so loudly.

Even yesterday, after the ordinances had been returned to the City Clerk's office, the Mayor was reluctant to admit he signed them.

The bond issues, for which bids will be taken April 24, are:

1—$2,500,000 five-year 3¼ per cent current expense bonds to cover the city deficit.

2—$1,050,000 30-year 3¼ per cent bonds to build new incineration plants.

3—$900,000 30-year 3¼ per cent funding bonds to cover contractors' claims on public improvements.

4—$210,000 30-year 3½ per cent bonds to improve the North Side Market.

The Mayor opposed the bond issues because he said the city should meet its expenses out of current revenues. According to well informe sources, the Mayor instructed his office staff to be silent about approval of the bonds.

Even after signing, the Mayor lashed particularly at the North Side Market House issue, which he declared is entirely unnecessary.

The North Side Chamber of Commerce has suggested to Council a committee of nine men to co-operate with the city in managing the market house. They are: Ralph J. Hite, James H. Stewart, William Bader, George A. Eckert, Will Theo, Louis Blumenschein, Leo Huber, Frank E. Tencate and Bertrand Croup.

TRUCKER FREED IN PLANE HAUL

The legal machinery of the United States Government could be thanked today for getting James Miller, a trucker, of 267 Baldwin street, Hays, out of jail, to which he was committed by Justice of the Peace Robert Fleming, of Aspinwall, yesterday, in default of payment of a $50 fine.

Justice Fleming had held Miller violated the state law by transporting on a truck, without a special permit, an army airplane that exceeded by 33 inches the length permitted on a state highway.

Miller was arrested February 18 by A. H. Kratzke, state highway patrolman, when he was taking a wrecked army plane from near the County Airport to Rogers Field, on instructions of Lieut. Corley P. McDarment, United States Army.

On application of First Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker issued a writ of habeas corpus directing Warden John McNeil to bring Miller "forthwith" into court and show cause why he should not be released from custody.

After hearing the circumstances of the arrest and the judgment of the Justice, the court ordered Miller released, holding there was illegal interference with a function of the government.

She and another woman Socialist were accused today of having supplied the fighting Socialists with food and cigarets during the battles in which government forces eradicated the militant Socialist movement.

SLAYER HANGS SELF IN CELL

LANCASTER, Pa., April 7.—(AP.)—John Brosevitch, who came to police headquarters for a night's lodging and told officers he killed a man in Ohio 14 years ago, died by his own hand.

Brosevitch was found hanging in his cell last night. Police said he used his belt after they had thwarted a previous attempt to hang himself with a window sash cord.

The man applied to police for lodging Wednesday night, and the next day told officers he was unable to sleep because of worry. Lieut. Lewis J. Matt said Brosevitch then admitted he shot a man at Mingo Junction, O., December 14, 1920.

Matt said Brosevitch told him he shot one of two men with whom he was gambling after one of them had fired at him. His victim, he said, was George Kusick. Ohio officials have said Kusick's death was recorded as suicide.

MODERN AMERICAN crime, developing horrible brutality, has produced nothing worse than the crime of drug-sellers recently indicated. Preying on the weakness of miserable drug victims, they got their last dollar in exchange for the poisons.

They decided that two of their victims had betrayed them, in return for money with which to buy more drugs. Pretending to supply them with narcotics, they gave these unfortunate drug addicts capsules filled with poison. One is dead, the other is reported dying.

Pen With Which Mayor Dropped S.P. Law Relic

The pen with which Mayor McNair struck from the books the old suspicious person ordinance is being preserved for posterity by Councilman Walter R. Demmler. The Mayor yesterday signed a repealer of the ordinance, long under fire as unconstitutional because it allowed arrest without specific criminal charge. Demmler, author of the repealer, and several Civil Liberties luminaries, attended the ceremony.

DICKEY SALARY SLASH SOUGHT

The county school directors, in a letter signed by U. G. Palmer, Verona school director, are asked to make a drastic cut in salaries of County Superintendent C. E. Dickey and his five assistants. The county directors meet next Thursday to elect a superintendent.

Dickey's salary now is $12,000 a year, and that of his assistants from $7,000 to $8,000. Palmer asks that Dickey be cut to $6,500 and his assistants to $4,500.

This, he points out, would mean a saving to the various school districts of $20,000 yearly. Citing that already many third-class districts have withdrawn from the county jurisdiction, and are appointing their own superintendents, Palmer said:

"If we do not make drastic changes in these salaries, look out for many more withdrawals in the near future, thus increasing the expense to us."

TORCH SLAYING LAID TO FEUD

MARIETTA, O., April 7.—(AP.)—The victim of a torch slaying, whose body was found on a roadside near New Matamoras, may be Charles Jackatti, member of a river gang, says Police Lieut. Charles E. Mills.

After an examination of the body at Woodsfield, Mills said identification was almost positive.

The officer added that Wheeling (W. Va.) police are also inclined to the theory that the victim was Jackatti and that he was killed in warfare among river gangsters.

Jackatti, who disappeared from Bellaire about five years ago, was arrested here last week on a vagrancy charge.

At that time he carried a rude dagger made from a tire tool. He told Mills he fashioned the weapon for his protection. Two men and a woman have been detained at Wheeling for investigation.

Monroe County authorities are checking Wheeling laundries for a clue to the victim's identity, after discovering a mark on a shirt collar.

Woman Badly Hurt In Fight, Man in Jail

Struck on the head with a chair during a fight in her home late yesterday, Mrs. Rose Mertz, 41, of 3211 Juliet street, was in Montefiore Hospital today with a probable skull fracture, according to police. The alleged assailant, Peter Reynolds, 36, who lives at the Juliet street address, was lodged in the Oakland Police Station.

HOTEL TRUSTEE AID SOUGHT IN STRIKE

3 Receivers Oppose Rehiring at Once All Who Walked Out

Federal Judge R. M. Gibson, who is conducting a hearing on the strike situation at the William Penn Hotel, at request of the receivers of the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, owner of the hotel, wants to be advised as to the attitude of the trustee for holders of first mortgage bonds towards the controversy between the hotel management and strikers.

Attorney John G. Frazer, representing the Union Trust Company, trustee, who sat yesterday as an observer at the hearing, said he will report the opinion of the trustee when the hearing resumes Monday. Both sides still have a number of witnesses to be heard.

LAUGH AT GUARDS

More than 200 strikers were spectators at yesterday's session and a laugh came from some of them when testimony revealed the hotel management is paying special guards $8 a day. They heard receivers of the hotel say they were opposed to taking the strikers back as a body, but were ready to take some back at once and others as vacancies occur.

Attorneys Frank R. Sack and Bessie Kann Sack, husband and wife, represent the strikers. Sack contended the hotel is being operated at a great loss because of the failure of the management to re-employ all those who went on strike. Francis L. Andrews, manager of the hotel, said to take the strikers back as a body would cause discord between those now working and those who went on strike.

TESTIMONY HEARD

Judge Gibson, from the bench, said he is concerned only as to what is best for the receivership and not as a mediator. Each of the three receivers, E. C. Eppley, W. Y. Cochen, Jr., and H. V. Blaxter, were on the witness stand, as well as a number of the striking employes. The receivers were represented by Attorneys W. S. Moorhead and Arthur W. Henderson.

Several of the strikers told of their willingness to go back to work if those who walked out were returned in a body. There was also testimony tending to show threats of intimidation made against hotel employes who are not on strike. The court was also told of daily demonstrations by strikers marching around the hotel.

QUERY WOMAN'S RIGHT TO VOTE

First hearing by the new Registration Commission on striking a voter's name from the permanent registration list was to be held at noon today, Jacob Frank, chairman of the commission announced.

Ina Wayne, of 73 Fullerton street, alleged by Frank to have been convicted in an election fraud case in 1932, was summoned to appear before the commission to show cause why her name should not be taken from the list.

The Wayne woman registered in the Third Ward, Seventh District.

Meanwhile, almost complete tabulations of registrations in the first 14 wards in the city show the Democratic and Republican adherents running close with 8,480 Republicans and 8,167 Democrats.

In addition to the first 10 wards recorded yesterday, the tabulation by wards follows:

Ward.	Rep.	Dem.
Eleventh	853	589
Twelfth	595	886
Thirteenth ...	877	1,036
Fourteenth ...	1,625	724

EXCHANGE BILL MARGIN RULES TO BE EASED

Despite Pecora Fight, Wall Street to Get Flexible Control

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP.)—The Fletcher-Rayburn stock market control bill probably will be modeled closer to Wall street desires before it emerges from Congress.

Signs from the Senate Banking Committee pointed in that direction today as a House Commerce Sub-Committee started changes on the measure that Speaker Rainey predicted would "ease up on it."

Chairman Fletcher intends to have the Senate committee vote Monday on a redrafted series of margin requirements. Close in line with New York Stock Exchange requests, the new provisions would drop hard and fast rules and leave their determination to the Federal Reserve Board.

Even Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, who has battled long for the measure's 60 per cent margin requirements, indicated he would go along on the new plan.

Samuel Untermyer, long a critic of exchange practices, apparently swayed the balance when he recommended the step.

Under the new plan the Reserve Board would be expanded by three members, and a special division would be set up within the board to handle such exchange matters.

The margin provisions have proved about the most troublesome section of the entire bill. Having previously been rewritten twice, once by Treasury and Federal Reserve experts, these clauses still drew heated criticism from stock exchange officials.

As for what may come out of the House committee meeting today, Speaker Rainey said:

"I don't know what the committee's going to do, but there is a big demand for liberalizing the bill. It probably can be done without destroying its efficiency."

ROAD EXTENSION TO BE DECIDED

Whether the County Commissioners will proceed with extension of the Ohio River boulevard from Haysville station to Broad street, Sewickley, will be decided at their meeting Tuesday.

Commissioner C. C. McGovern announced this following a meeting yesterday with representatives of Ohio Valley boroughs and Pennsylvania Railroad officials.

Under tentative arrangements with the Federal Relief Works Division, the county's share of the improvements, excepting property damage expense, would be $99,870, compared with $98,067 to be provided by the FRWD.

Yesterday's meeting was concerned with securing an advance estimate on the cost of property damage involved. Representatives of interested groups were studying the territory today.

Included in the conference were James C. Chaplin, heading a Sewickley delegation; W. D. Wiggins, chief engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad; H. D. Irwin, burgess of Edgeworth; C. S. Wisner, burgess of Osborne.

Great Pressure Used by Utilities To Sway Voters

By W. W. CHAPLIN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Besides forcing through laws affecting the electric utilities, the electric ring engages in deliberate, though secretive, efforts to "swing" elections.

Washington representatives of the electric interests acknowledge that means are employed to sway voters into voting against their own best interests.

They insist there is no central force directing the gigantic campaigns of propaganda to influence elections, but it is admitted such practices are widespread, and the general methods used in all cases are the same.

Whenever an election is approaching which will decide whether or not some particular city shall erect a municipal electric plant, the campaign of "education" begins.

VOTERS DELUGED

The voters are deluged with letters, pamphlets, every form of printed argument carrying messages which opponents of the ring say are largely misleading, if not actually false.

Some of this propaganda comes frankly from the local power company. But in most cases far more of it emanates from mushroom "civic organizations," "voters' leagues" and "citizens' committees" which in effect are the secret tools of the ring.

No connection with private electric interests appears on the stationery of these organizations, but national representatives of the power trust here admit that in almost all cases they are inspired if not actually organized by the company which would be affected by a competing municipal plant.

APPEAL TO THRIFT

Businessmen over whom some influence is held or citizens who have been convinced the value of utilities securities they own would be damaged by a city plant, generally make up these "committees."

And one of their greatest appeals is to the thrift of the thousands of small investors who have one or two shares of utility stock.

Soon after the war utility companies began to infiltrate their securities among the general public. Purchase of shares of small par value was made easy. Millions were sold.

Now the utilities ring is harvesting this crop, cautioning these little stockholders that they must protect their own interests, guard themselves against the threat of municipal competition, which might cut off the dribble of dividends into their pockets.

FALSE ECONOMY

This has proven a strong argument among voters who have not stopped to find out if the saving in low rate electricity from a municipal plant might not far outbalance any lessening of the income from their stock.

Such swaying of elections from behind the protective screen of specially formed "protective committees" and such organizations is but one of the activities continued by the electric ring since it pretended to "clean house" two years ago.

But it is one which may have considerable airing before conclusion this summer of the Federal Trade Commission's six-year investigation of the industry, an investigation studded with sensation and with scandal.

CHILD RALLY TOMORROW

Two special services will be held by the Volunteers of America in their chapel at 724 East Diamond street tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. A rally for all Sunday School children will feature a musical program and a short Bible talk by Capt. Elizabeth Hoffman.

In the evening children of the neighborhood whose parents have been attendants at the Volunteers' Sunday meeting, will be baptized with Col. Frank H. Wise and the Rev. Cyrus Hoffman, oldest brevet officer in the organization, officiating. An old-fashioned Volunteer praise service and a special musical program will complete the service.

State Committee Plans Legion Meet

ERIE, Pa., April 7.—(AP.)—Looking to the annual get-together of Pennsylvania "buddies," the state executive committee of the American Legion meets today and plans for the state convention in Erie, August 16-18.

Officers of the 28th Division, A. E. F., are planning a reunion, to be held in connection with the convention.

DRASTIC STEPS TO BE SOUGHT IN CONGRESS

Propaganda Hearings Before Commission Next Week

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP.)—The administration today was moving along three fronts to bring public utilities under stricter governmental supervision, although no congressional action was expected at this session.

The movements were:

The Trade Commission set about preparing its report for Congress, recommending drastic legislation for Congress at its next session.

The Power Commission, already moving to regulate more closely the construction of power dams, was preparing, under congressional authorization, to investigate rates charged the public by the utilities.

NRA, at work for several weeks on a code for the utilities industry, was seeking to eradicate controversial points involving competition with municipal plants.

READY FOR HEARINGS

Trade Commission officials meanwhile arranged for hearings next week into propaganda activities of several companies, including Associated Gas and Electric Company, about which testimony was given last week linking it with political activities of State Senator W. T. Thayer, of New York.

Work on the commission's report, the product of more than five years' inquiry, has disclosed capital stock write-ups of more than $1,250,000,000 by public utility companies.

These write-ups were said to have the effect of increasing rates since the utility companies were permitted to make a certain percentage return on their capital and the larger the capital, the larger the return.

MILLIONS SAVED

Some officials said the commission's investigation had already saved the public hundreds of millions of dollars by causing companies under investigation to cut rates.

The Power Commission has not laid out the program for its investigation of rates, but it was said authoritatively there would be quick action, and the comparisons would tend to bring rates into a closer relation.

NRA's activities in codifying the industry relate primarily to activities within the industry, but a completed code would tend to bring activities of the industry under closer government observation.

FEAR BOMB PLOT AFTER RIOTS

MINNEAPOLIS, April 7.—(AP.)—Police machine gunners, fearing a bomb plot, stood guard today at City Hall, stormed yesterday by a raging mob of 6,000 unemployed and sympathizers.

Riot squads had watched all night, warned by Chief Michael Johannes that he had received a tip that the City Hall might be bombed.

The Council voted to recommend demands of the mob, including continuance of the CWA and increased relief allowances.

Policemen, supported by masked machine guns, which they did not call into use, beat back the rioters with clubs and gas bombs, but not before a dozen of the officers were injured. The mob, hurling blocks, coal, bottles and scrap iron, picked up unexploded gas bombs and tossed them back at the police.

About 20 persons were injured in all. Thirty were arrested, including 23 members of a committee which entered the combination City Hall-Courthouse to lay the demands before the Council.

McNair Launches Drive To Cut Pinchot's Pay

After receiving a suggestion from Gov. Pinchot that a "conscience fund" might be set up by the city to receive a portion of Mayor McNair's $15,000 salary, the Mayor has started a campaign to reduce the salary of the Governor and other state officials.

McNair has sent letters to a number of candidates for Governor asking them to join him in a request to Pinchot to include in his call for a special session of the Legislature an adjustment of the salaries of state executives. He wrote:

"In my opinion it is a waste of money to pay anybody in the state setup more than $10,000 a year, and I would favor a bill to that effect making that the maximum salary of all state officials."

McNair makes the point that the only way to be sure of cutting the salaries of state officials is to do it before they are elected. Pinchot in his reply to McNair said he never had any difficulty in refunding a portion of his own salary.

G.O.P. Admits Wirt Quiz Won't Pillory NRA

WASHINGTON, [illegible]7.—(AP.)—Republicans conceded today that they have little chance of turning the Dr. William A. Wirt inquiry into an exhaustive scrutiny of the New Deal.

They would like to make it just that, but Democrats say "no."

The Gary (Ind.) educator will be asked next Tuesday to name the "brain truster" he accused of saying that President Roosevelt is only a Kerensky, to be supplanted at the proper moment by a Stalin.

As Republicans see it, if Dr. Wirt gives the name, the "brain truster" will be summoned to deny or [illegible] firm. A denial, the G. O. [illegible] say, would mean the in- [illegible]was all washed up, while a confirmation would simply mean one officeholder out of a job.

The Democrats explain the inquiry is limited to the Wirt statement, read to the House Interstate Commerce Committee by James H. Rand. They say there are many signs of economic recovery and that a lengthy investigation, with its charges and countercharges might lead to uncertainty.

Said Fred C. Howe, consumers' counsel of the Farm Administration and a member of the Roosevelt advisory group:

"It is a favorite trick to draw a red herring across any movement for bettering human or social relations, in order to divert attention from the real issue."

MRS. ROOSEVELT URGES REFORMS, 'NEW DEAL' FOR SCHOOLS

NEEDED CHANGE OUTLINED BY FIRST LADY

Educational Parley Gets Smith Plea For Tax Relief

COLUMBUS, O., April 7.—(AP.)—A "vice principal" took the floor late yesterday in the citizens' conference on the crisis in education and spoke her mind on a variety of subjects, emphasizing the need of a new deal for teachers.

The speaker was Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, of Todhunter School, New York City, First Lady of the Land.

More than 4,000 laymen and teachers jammed Memorial Hall to standing-room capacity while hundreds of others waited outside in an intermittent April drizzle to catch sight of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Speaking extemporaneously from a handful of notes, Mrs. Roosevelt invoked educational reforms in this "period of change" through which her husband is leading the nation. She declared:

"It is the teacher who must understand that change and interpret it so as to be useful to the future of our country. What we need now is the ability to cooperate with each other for the good of the whole nation."

COVERS WIDE RANGE

Mrs. Roosevelt's address touched upon a multitude of questions related to education.

Then she suggested:

"Economize, but not on teachers' salaries, nor on books or equipment."

The First Lady argued that fancy architecture doesn't make a good school.

She expressed sympathy for taxpayers, but added:

"There has been no waste in salaries to teachers nor in equipment, but we have thought that brick and mortar and marble make a good school. They don't."

She pleaded for equal rights for men and women teachers.

She voiced hope for the day when the training of teachers will be placed on a higher plane.

TAX REFORM URGED

In a message, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, said the task of providing adequate school facilities belongs to the state. He cautioned federal financial aid for schools might result in federal control.

He stressed two other points:

"Problems of education cannot be solved until tax systems have been revised to relieve general property, especially agriculture, and to tap those sources of revenue represented by income and segregation of wealth." And:

"Administrative machinery of our school systems is antiquated, ineffective, expensive, unsuited to the needs of our day."

'LIFER' FREED; SEES CITY

Frank Maley, who 23 years ago was sentenced to death for the murder of a Moon Run man, was in New York today preparing to sail to his old home in Jugo-Slavia to attend the wedding of his niece, who three months ago postponed the event until her uncle could attend.

Maley was released from Western Penitentiary last night. In 1911 he was sentenced to hang for the murder, and five times his execution was postponed. Then his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. Three months ago the life sentence was commuted, and he was freed last night.

The first man to greet him was Judd H. Bruff, Sheriff at the time Maley was sentenced to die, and who took him to the penitentiary. Bruff took him for an automobile ride through the city before placing him on a train for New York.

SCOUTS SEEKING DAZED MAN

Twenty-five Boy Scouts today were scouring Wilkins Township for a man feared to be lost or wandering in a dazed condition since early Tuesday.

Scouts from Troop No. 1, Wilkins Township and Forest Hills, were mobilized to search for Robert E. Gailey, about 50, who wandered away from his home in Wallace street, Wilkins Township, before daylight Tuesday.

Gailey, who is near-sighted and an inveterate pipe smoker, left his glasses and tobacco in his room the morning of his disappearance, according to John S. Helmer, chairman of the Wilkins Scout troop.

Scout Leader Charles E. Helmer early this morning deployed his 25 Scouts in a semi-circle to comb the entire township. The first route followed was from the center of Wilkins Township toward Turtle Creek.

Gailey, who was reported to be in good health, may have had a lapse of memory, in the opinion of John S. Helmer, who is supervising the search from headquarters set up in the Franklin School, Greensburg Pike.

As the fifth day of his disappearance approached, his wife appealed to Helmer to conduct the search.

Heart Attack Fatal To Patient on Walk

DEATH HOLDS UP BALM TRIAL

LOS ANGELES, April 7.—(AP.)—The death of a juror's wife caused a recess until Tuesday of the trial of Marjorie Whiteis' $100,000 suit charging Harry Joe Brown, movie director, with breaking a promise to marry her just before he wed Sally Eilers, screen blonde.

As Brown came back to court yesterday prepared to resume testimony in his own defense, it was announced Juror Otto Pitsch's wife had died.

Defense lawyers said after Brown completes his testimony, they will put on "a lot of witnesses" in his behalf.

Brown has denied he ever told Miss Whiteis, as she testified, that he was going around with Miss Eilers because the latter could aid him in his career. He denied he ever had talked to Miss Whiteis' half-brother, Jim Bridges, about marrying Marjorie.

Testifying for her husband, Miss Eilers said he was with her "practically every night" after they returned last spring from Europe on the same boat.

STORM BRINGS TROLLEY CRASH, TWO HURT

Cars Collide Detouring Washout; Rainfall Damages Valley

Two persons were injured and 10 others were shaken up when a McKeesport street car, detouring from Hays to Lincoln Place around a 50-foot washout, caused by the storm, was struck by another, Pittsburgh-bound, at Wallace stop last night.

The two injured passengers, Mrs. Catherine Day, of 5303 Pride street, Lincoln Place, and Alexander Barko, of Hays, were able to go to their homes. There were four passengers in the city-bound car and eight in the one that was backing up, police said.

Monongahela and Turtle Creek valleys were hard hit by the half-hour thunderstorm, which halted traffic and flooded cellars.

Streets of Turtle Creek Valley boroughs were covered with mud and water. The water stalled automobiles and flooded cellars in Hawkins avenue, North Braddock.

Through traffic from Ardmore boulevard to Lincoln highway was rerouted when mud and rocks slipped from the hillside into Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh.

STADTFELD SON HURT AT HOME

Police today were rounding up the details of a disturbance that occurred shortly after midnight at the home of Superior Court Judge Joseph Stadtfeld, 5575 Wilkins avenue, involving the judge's son, Attorney Harold Stadtfeld.

The son was reported to have been injured slightly and treated at Homeopathic Hospital following a scuffle with a companion. The police report said Thomas Berger was also treated at the hospital.

Judge Stadtfeld and Mrs. Stadtfeld said today that their son was very ill, and had been on the verge of a nervous breakdown for some months.

Mrs. Stadtfeld explained that her son returned home about 11 o'clock last night and retired to his room. He became excited, she said, and imagined that there were burglars in the house.

When some friends attempted to quiet him, she declared, a vase was knocked over and he was injured slightly.

QUEEN OF CULT AWAITS 'FATE'

As Queen Fish of the Aquarium Faith Society, Katherine Day, Negro cult leader, today awaited a verdict on whether she made "suckers" of Maggie Weaver and Willie Mae Bush, two of her converts.

Maggie Weaver, who is cook for the socially prominent Maynard Tealls, 6209 Kentucky avenue, and Mae Bush, who cooks for the Charles J. Caspars, 1537 Dennistion avenue, charged the Queen Fish with larceny on grounds she took a $20 bill from each of them during a scheme to make the money miraculously multiply.

Testifying before Judge Thomas M. Marshall at the Queen Fish's trial yesterday, the two cooks said the cult leader had converted them from spiritualism to her aquarium society and then told them she could make their money grow if they let her sew it up in a handkerchief with scriptural readings.

When they opened the handkerchiefs later, their money was gone, they charged.

'STONE BOY' 9 ON MONDAY

International News Service.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 7.—Still courageous and cheerful, Benny Hendricks, the "stone boy," today looked forward with boyish eagerness to the celebration of his ninth birthday on Monday.

While scores of congratulatory messages poured in on him from all sections of the country, Benny was kept closely guarded at the Wilkes-Barre General Hospital where science is waging a battle to save him from slow petrification and eventual death.

Six-year-old Francis Wydallis, the state's other "stone boy" victim, continued his bleak existence on a small farm on the outskirs of Luzerne County, far from the reach of physicians.

Francis, whose back and neck have already hardened, was living in direst poverty with his widowed mother and seven brothers and sistrs, in a two-roomed tar-papered shack.

YACHT KILLING 'WITNESS' HELD

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. Lillian Collings, of Stamford, Conn., widow of Benjamin Collings, slain on a yacht in Long Island Sound September 10, 1931, last night failed to identify George Hutley, held by police for questioning, as one of the two men who threw Collings overboard.

Mrs. Collings, accompanied by her lawyer, William Kelley, viewed a lineup of prisoners drawn from the county jail, among whom was Hutley, an unemployed seaman, who voluntarily submitted to questioning. After 30 minutes, Mrs. Collings told officers she was unable to pick out any man connected with her husband's slaying.

Future Laws May Depend on Who Can Hit Hardest

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Shame that Mr. Roosevelt didn't include an old duelling oak in his reforestation plans.

Legislation seems to have become physical. Future laws may depend on who can punch the hardest.

Our national protagonists take the floor with their shields on their chests and mattresses strapped to their backs. Challenges fill the air. For every howl on the hilltop there is a bark in the valley.

Recovery, taxation and progress are personal affairs. No question is so complicated that it cannot be settled with fists.

Harsh names and epithets are mixed freely. This will go too far. Some day a man will be called a liar who ain't one.

5 MORE SEIZED IN HOLDUPS

William Esett, 22, of 17 East Robinson street, was held for court by Magistrate Charles Papale in North Side Police Station today, while police attempted to link him to a series of holdups throughout the city.

The charges on which Isett was held involved robberies in the North Side.

Five persons arrested on information claimed by police to have been given by Isett were turned over to police of No. 1 and No. 5 districts and to the Detective Bureau for investigation.

They were Edward Farron, 23, of Springdale; Clyde Butler, 24, and his wife, Beulah Butler, 23, of 307 Sandusky street, who were turned over to the police, and Gildo DeRosso, 23, and Frank Baker, 26, both arrested at 505 Union avenue, who were turned over to the Detective Bureau.

COCOANUT CLUB FUTURE ARID

The Cocoanut Grove Club, 5124 Liberty avenue, faced an arid future today.

Judge Thomas M. Marshall yesterday revoked the beer and liquor licenses of the club. He previously had suspended the licenses after a hearing at which residents of the district testified their sleep was disturbed in the early morning hours by patrons of the club.

The revocation is said to be the first instance of a night club suffering loss of the permit granted by the State Liquor Control Board.

Court Puts Off Helen Kane's Booping Bee

NEW YORK, April 7.—(Universal.)—Helen Kane, self-styled original boop-a-doop girl, led a crew of other boopers into court yesterday to put on a boop contest, but Supreme Court Justice Miller couldn't take it.

Just as Helen was clearing her throat to boop in an attempt to prove that others had copied her mannerisms, Justice Miller held up his hand and ordered a postponement.

Helen is suing two picture studios, and the other boopers, named in the suit as workers for the studios, were ready to boop, too. They are Mae Questel, Margy Hines and Bonnie Poe. Miss Kane said she would boop later.

FEAR ANOTHER DEATH TRY BY MRS. MASSIE

Threats Revealed as Genoa Clinic Puts Her Under Guard

GENOA, Italy, April 7.—(AP.)—Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie was guarded closely in a clinic today lest she attempt suicide again.

The young woman, principal in the Honolulu attack and murder case of two years ago, was confined to the clinic Thursday night when the liner Roma brought her here.

Officers of the ship said she had slashed her wrists and jumped from the top deck to a lower deck en route from New York. Her injuries were slight, but she was highly nervous.

CONDITION BETTER

Dr. Darrio Borelli, clinic director, said her "general state" was better, but warned:

"It may be she is simulating indifference, like all cases of alienation, in order to carry out her desires."

He ordered her room barred to all save a few visitors. Dr. Borelli said Mrs. Massie insisted at first that she would "do it again at the first opportunity" because of her regret at having got a divorce.

She and Lieut. Thomas Hedges Massie, U. S. N., were divorced at Reno in February.

'ACUTE MELANCHOLY'

The director diagnosed her case as acute melancholy, commenting:

"She ought to be looked after even after she is discharged from here."

Mrs. John R. Putnam, wife of the American consul, was permitted to visit Mrs. Massie this morning. She carried her a number of cablegrams from friends in America.

POSSE FOLLOWS BARROW TRAIL

FORT SCOTT, Kan., April 7.—(AP.)—Clyde Barrow, phantom desperado of the Southwest, fled before a growing army of police today after releasing a kidnaped police chief whose companion he had murdered.

Scores of officers went into action along the Kansas-Missouri border after the desperado and his two companions released Percy Boyd, Commerce (Okla.) chief of police, early today. They held him prisoner more than 14 hours.

They abducted him near Commerce yesterday after Barrow had shot and killed Cal Campbell, 63, Miami (Okla.) constable. Boyd and Campbell had sought to investigate actions of two men and a woman whose motor car was mired in a mudhole.

Boyd, who suffered a scalp wound, said he was positive as to the identification of Barrow and Bonnie Parker, the desperado's cigar-smoking companion. He expressed the belief the other member of the trio was Raymond Hamilton.

He said they had three machine guns, three shotguns, several pistols and a suitcase full of ammunition.

DAYLIGHT TIME LEADS POLL

The score in Mayor McNair's postcard poll on daylight saving now stands at 334 in favor to 150 against. The cards are coming into the Mayor's office in steadily increasing numbers.

The official board of the Friendship Park Methodist Episcopal Church has passed a resolution against daylight saving and sent it to Council. The board charges that the daylight arrangement adversely affects the attendance at Sunday evening services.

Council President Robert Garland has been urging the Mayor to sign the proclamation, which by common consent would turn most clocks forward one hour at 2 a. m. April 29, but the Mayor says he wants an indication of public opinion first.

Garland to Speak On 'Daylight Time'

Robert Garland, president of the City Council, who inaugurated daylight saving time in Pittsburgh 17 years ago, will be guest of the Globe Trotter over station WCAE at 6:30 o'clock this evening. Mr. Garland will discuss Mayor McNair's postcard poll on daylight saving and advocate retention of the 17-year-old custom.

School Desks Attacked As Peril to Health

School desks, at which boys and girls spend a large part of their time for at least 12 years, bore the brunt of an attack today at the concluding sessions of the regional meeting of the Pennsylvania Conference on Social Welfare.

Before the meeting in Webster Hall, Dr. Harold A. Miller, director of the medical relief program of the State Emergency Relief Board, declared:

"The trouble with the majority of desks in public schools is that they were made for grades and not for children.

"The inadequacy in types of school desks and the haphazard way in which they are assigned to children, apparently with no thought of the size of the child is responsible for a great deal of physical misfortune to many children."

Spinal curvature, deformed pelvis and probable internal disarrangement have come about as a result of children being forced to sit at desks unsuited to them, Dr. Miller asserted. He concluded:

"The medical relief program in Pennsylvania will be complete only when this and attention to teeth, tonsils, ears, eyes, hygenic marriage and periodic health examinations receive serious attention in every school district."

Dr. Franklin Royer, Emergency Child Health Committee vice chairman, spoke on "Protection of Child Health in the Depression."

A luncheon was sponsored by the Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies, with Marcus W. Acheson, Jr., president, presiding.

Speakers included Frank Bane, director of the Public Welfare Association of Chicago, and Douglas P. Falconer, director of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities. Falconer has been working here as state investigator of Allegheny County Relief Administration.

Daughter Sees Educator Leap to River Death

TUNKHANNOCK, Pa., April 7.—(AP.)—John E. Morgan, superintendent of Wyoming County schools, leaped to his death from a bridge, while a daughter, who had unsuspectingly driven him to the scene, looked on in horror.

Miss Ruth Morgan, the daughter, said that she and her 54-year-old father were driving from their home in Tunkhannock to Kingston to visit relatives yesterday. As they crossed the bridge over the Susquehanna River at Falls, she said, her father asked her to stop. Thinking him ill, she complied.

Morgan got out of the automobile, walked to the guard rail and plunged into the swirling stream.

Because of the high water his body had not been recovered after hours of grappling.

County superintendent of schools for 20 years, Morgan announced a few days ago that he would not seek re-election again because of ill health. His present term would have expired in July. He had been principal of the Nicholson High School before becoming superintendent. His service in Wyoming schools dated to 1897.

GRAND JURY EXPENSES AND DELAY FLAYED BY ATTORNEY

BAR BODY GETS ARGUMENTS ON SYSTEM

Arguments in consideration of abolition of the grand jury system in Allegheny County were presented yesterday at a meeting of the legislative committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association.

Appearing as an advocate of abolition, Attorney Anthony Lucas, who before coming to Pittsburgh was district attorney in Houghton County, Michigan, for three terms, assailed the system as to costs, delays and protection afforded inefficient district attorneys.

Lucas urged adoption of the "information system" in operation in Michigan, under which cases are first brought before a magistrate or squire, who passes them on directly to the district attorney. Disposition of cases under the system would entail only a fraction of the time and cost now necessary, he said.

Assistant District Attorney William H. Colvin, objecting to abolition, suggested that a "one-man grand jury," under the system urged by Lucas, would also abolish the process of "keeping in touch with the people" and possibly the "human element" represented by the grand jury.

Attorney H. P. Eberharter also appeared before the committee, and Mayor McNair dropped in briefly, explaining that he had to attend a funeral. No action was taken at yesterday's meeting.

The Story of Solomon

CHAPTER IV

Told in Pictures by Dan Smith

And it came to pass when Solomon had finished building the house of the Lord and the king's house, that the Lord appeared to Solomon in a dream a second time, as he had appeared to him before at Gideon.

Then Hiram came out of Tyre to see the twenty cities Solomon had given him in Galilee, for the cedar and fir and gold he had used for the temple; and they pleased him not, and he called them the land of Cabul.

Later Solomon built Milo, and the wall of Jerusalem, and Hazor, and Megiddo. He also rebuilt Gezer, which Pharaoh had taken and burnt with fire and given to his daughter, who was Solomon's wife. Men of the children of Israel Solomon made his warriors and servants and princes, but of others he made bondsmen. And Pharaoh's daughter came up out of the city of David to her house, which Solomon had built for her.

'BROTHERHOOD' MOVEMENT SPURRED

"Brotherhood Day," part of a nationwide movement to foster a spirit of real brotherhood among the Jews, Protestants and Catholics will be observed in Pittsburgh on Sunday, April 29.

The movement, fostered by the National Conference of Jews and Christians, has been given the indorsement of the Rev. Thomas F Coakley, of Sacred Heart parish, here, and many other churchmen of various religious affiliations have spoken for the movement.

Plans and programs are being arranged by ministers of the different religious sects, but it is said the observance of the day will be largely individual to each of the churches participating.

Father Coakley, indorsing the Brotherhood day, said:

"I am heartily in accord with every effort that will eliminate inter-racial and inter-religious antagonisms in this and every other country. If the religious people of the United States set an example of stressing goodwill on one Sunday of the year it would have incalculable results."

The Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman is chairman of the Brotherhood Day, which has received the indorsement of leaders in Protestantism, Jewery and Catholicism.

Sponsors of the movement say the Brotherhood Day will aim to enable American Catholics, Protestants and Jews to rise above the old suspicions and prejudices, to look for ways of effectively working together as citizens of American democracy and to maintain and safeguard the American ideal of religious freedom and brotherhood.

SMILE ON THY PEOPLE AGAIN

NRA ANTHEM

By BROOKS HAYDEN (WLM)

Lord, God of America, smile on Thy people again.
Are we not whipped enough now? Thou knowest the hearts of men.
Scourged by Thy righteous wrath, prostrate and helpless we lie.
Lift us, O, Lord, we pray, we no more Thy Law will defy.
Lord, God of America, Thou knowest the hearts of men.
Now we are meek and penitent, smile on Thy people again.
Lord God of America, no more the Baal of Greed
Will we bow down before, Thou Only God we will heed.
Grant us Thy favor, O, God, as in the days of our youth;
From Thee we receive all things, Thou art our Life and our Truth.
Lord, God of America, grant us Thy favor again.
Smile on Thy people, O, Lord, Thou knowest the hearts of men.
Lord, God of America, grant us forgiveness, we pray;
We are Thy people, O, Lord, no more from Thee will we stray.
Lend us again as of old, scourge us again if need be.
We are Thy people, O, Lord; meekly we will follow Thee.
Give us Thy blessing, O, Lord, Thou knowest the hearts of men.
Open our eyes to Thy Justice, smile on Thy people again.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS!

Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance

By MARION BRUNOT

Liking Is One Thing but Love Is Quite Another

The study of womankind is man.

At least we are told so by a 60-year-old Parisienne actress who has been in the limelight of the French capital for years.

It is Cecile Sorel. And she confides in us that she has more admirers at 60 than she had 20 years ago.

"And why?" inquires Cecile.

And being a woman, she answers herself immediately:

"Because I have studied men. And I really like them. Most women don't."

What nonsense. Not liking the men. And yet the stacks of letters that come in to me speak, each one, of an aching heart, and the love of some one fellow!

Yet there is a difference between LIKING and LOVING. The one is a practical condition of the emotions which puts both you and the one liked on splendid terms. But the other is a seething sensation which contorts our senses. And often causes an ill effect on both sight and hearing.

If we like a person, chances are we are agreeable and helpful to him. But not so, in love. That often brings in suspicion. And no one is attractive with the light of that evil sprite in their eye. Love also humbles us in a queer way. And no one ever pictures a devastating VAMP as humble.

WORKS WRONG WAY

A fast beating heart where LOVE is the ACCELERATOR often puts us into REVERSE.

And it is just too bad!

One sometimes has to be old in experience, like this Mme. Sorel, before the gears of emotion are well under control. And that doesn't seem quite right either.

Youth and love should be ours at the same time.

For it isn't everyone, like this French actress, who can be attractive enough physically at 60, to find men who are willing to tarry.

But then she says she LIKES the men. And some of us don't really do that. Oh, yes. We may be in love with one of them. But when it comes to wanting him around all the while, to putting up with all his idiosyncrasies. Caring for him when he is riding the waves and also when he is sinking. Allowing him undisputed rights in the smaller social amenities. Tolerating him when he is unshaven and when he has a bad cold. And even when "he retires from active business." These are other matters.

And so we often find ourselves almost disliking him.

And then men aren't so thick skinned where such is the case. They have a sixth sense where not being wanted comes in. Like Lincoln said of people at Gettysburg. You can fool some of them perhaps all of the time, all of them part of the time, but not all of them all of the time.

It may be your luck and mine, sister, to go up against the last kind of the masculine gender.

CAN'T FORGET BOY

A girl from Elizabeth, Pa., writes me:

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a constant reader of your SPEAK UP, SISTERS. And enjoy it so much. How you can think of so many different things to say, is remarkable. I am 17 years of age, and in love with a boy a few years my senior. He kept coming to see me ever so often. But lately he has ceased to do so. I cannot imagine what keeps him away. I try to forget him and keep busy and go out with other people, but he is constantly popping into my thoughts.

Will you help me to get him back?

IN NEED OF SOLACE.

Perhaps you need to read very carefully what this Mme. Sorel says. Maybe you haven't made enough of a STUDY of your boy friend. You know, if we want a job in some office, we plan diligently to get it. If we are anxious to get good marks at school, we work all sorts of hours over our books. Yet when it comes to winning and keeping our boy friends, we just let fate take care of itself. We don't realize at all, we are dealing with another human creature who wants consideration as well as we do. Who wants his ideas listened to. We are too prone to be in love with love instead of the boy friend. And we imagine him something too wonderful to be earth-made. And that it where we make one big mistake.

Be patient, and this fellow will drift around again. And when he does do not let your fascination for him absorb you so far that you can't see him as he is. And cater to him as just that. Be a good PAL. And LIKE him as well as love him.

Mrs. Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

MISS AMERICA LOOKS AT A NEW, YOUNG QUEEN—NO. 4

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Astrid worried the old regime somewhat by her democratic attentions to her baby.
THEIR MEETINGS AFTER PARTINGS ARE A JOY TO THE NATION.
WITH CHARLOTTE-JOSEPHINE.. SIX YRS OLD
And this -- is Queen Astrid's little crown Prince, Baudouin.

Here we show young Sue and Sally America that other young girl, Queen Astrid of Belgium, in pictures for the last time. Some pictures and a few words about her queenhood.

Time goes on, and the little queen will go on, out of these pictures, in her real life—happily forever after, Sally and Sue hope—with her fine young husband and her two beautiful children, loving and loved.

It has not always been "under a happy star" to have been born in the way of becoming a queen. The woeful histories of unhappy queens are thick on the pages of history; darkest where there was a little Crown Prince, and conspirators clashing over a throne, to wring her heart through him.

Queen Astrid was a happy child princess, a happy young girl princess, and is now a happy queen. Through the rich golden fabric of a life born to royalty has run the homely thread of simplicity, from the time she was a little girl. This and good fortune have given her the crown of contentment along with that more tangible one glowing with precious stones.

Curious for Sally and Sue to take a look at the "golden" side of being a queen, and at the real crown—ablaze! For see this, Sally and Sue. YOU have but one wedding, never forgotten. But only one. Astrid had THREE marriages; one in her native Stockholm, and two in Brussels, her adopted capital.

At the Stockholm wedding, the most splendid, the most romantically colored—that one which Astrid must remember as her one wedding—there were four kings, two queens, and more than a score of princes and princesses! Gustave of Sweden, that king of the fierce winged mustaches, the fine eyes and the excessively tall, athletic body of a young man, sat upon his throne with his queen. Forming a glittering aisle to their throne the guest nobility and royalty were seated on either side. A glamorous array of uniforms, decorations, ribbons, diamond stars, gold braid, and the pearls and satin of the women! Before them stood Leopold in khaki uniform, and Astrid in white satin and antique lace. Two little pages carried her train.

Following this marriage their journey to Belgium and her young prince's home, was marked with ceremony—all the ceremony that she and her husband had managed to escape in their courtship. Leopold went home aboard a Belgian cruiser; Astrid, with her mother aboard a Swedish man-of-war. Their meeting, in all its ardor and youthful, unself-conscious delight, was something remembered by those who watched their embrace. There followed the marriage ceremonies in Brussels.

Astrid came into a royal household already prepared to love her. In walks with close friends the late King Albert, loved and admired the world over, spoke with deep feeling of his pleasure in his new daughter. Some of her simple, direct ways of going about being happy made her new queen mother a little apprehensive about the effect upon their public. For Astrid loved to stroll arm-in-arm on the trim boulevards with Leopold, alone in "we two" fashion.

When her little daughter was born, she pushed her own baby carriage—oh, unheard of!— in public. She cooked many of their own meals. She rose in the dawning at 7 to attend her baby herself, and tucked her in at night. They ran away alone for winter sports in Switzerland, where they were when the news of King Albert's tragic death ran around the world.

By this time, when the duties of being king and queen were touching them at last, Belgium had grown to love these very free and easy ways of their Astrid—the royal girl who saw her kingly father-in-law's birthday parade from the curb, with her baby daughter and the rest of the populace!

Astrid is some weeks a real queen now. She watched her young husband pledge allegiance to parliament. On one side of her sat little Princess Charlotte Josephine; on the other, the lively little Crown Prince Baudouin, who took such audible interest in the coronation of his father that his mother must needs take him on her lap to quiet him.

The little girl in Sweden is left behind, still playing in that magic way that the little-girl-one-once-was can do. And the other self of the little girl has gone on and become what Astrid, the young girl, is said to have confided she was "not fitted to be," a queen.

The picture is done. But the little queen goes on, happily forever after, Sue and Sally hope. —NELL BRINKLEY.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Dummy as the Master Hand

One of the most difficult things for many Bridge players to realize is the fact that in the play of the hand at a suit declaration the Declarer's own hand should not always be the controlling one. Frequently hands occur in which the closed hand should be made to play a role secondary to that of the Dummy, and a mastery of the principle underlying this is essential when the player is to realize the most out of the cards he plays.

The hand below, which was played in the recent World Bridge Olympic, exemplifies this method of play:

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ 7 5 3 2 ♡ 10 8 5 ◇ K 9 5 2 ♣ A 10
♠ J 10 9 8 ♡ A 6 3 2 ◇ 8 4 ♣ K Q 3	North West East South	♠ A K Q 4 ♡ 7 ◇ A J 7 6 3 ♣ 8 5 2
	♠ 6 ♡ K Q J 9 4 ◇ Q 10 ♣ J 9 7 6 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♠ (1)	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—Anticipating only a heart response, one diamond would probably be the better Opening bid. However, by bidding one spade on this hand there will be a good response available to any bid that West may make except two hearts, whereas an Opening call of one diamond will embarrass East if the response is one notrump or two clubs.

In the play of the hand if South makes his normal Opening of the heart King, Declarer must play for a cross-ruff rather than make any attempt to draw trumps and set up the diamond suit. He should win Trick 1 with the heart Ace and then ruff a heart with his spade Queen, and now play a club to establish an extra entry to Dummy so that all three of his own high trumps can be used for ruffing purposes.

The defense, after winning the club Ace, will probably lead a spade, and Declarer should win with Dummy's eight. In this way three immediate entries to Dummy are furnished, and the Ace, King and Queen of spades in Declarer's hand are made separately by ruffing losing hearts from the Dummy and leaving Dummy's four trumps intact. Thus the Dummy is eventually set up with the loss of but two club tricks and one diamond trick, and the contract of four spades is fulfilled.

Incidentally, the Opening lead of his singleton spade by South will defeat the contract assuming that when North gets in another spade is led. This Opening, however, is most unlikely from South's holding.

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

Romance in Air—Madge Wonders About Edith

Carolyn is as quick as the proverbial cat, but her agility did her no good in the face of Bob's determination. She had ragged the boy a bit too much and, though she dodged his first rush, he swerved and caught her.

"Here's where a woman is going to pay, and pay, and pay," he declared. "The Lord knows I'm a patient man, and I can stand most things; but when it comes to calling me both a hog and a magpie, my proud southern blood rises right up—"

"I didn't," Carolyn protested, giggling.

"Words to that effect, lass; words to that effect," Bob said sternly. 'You can't wriggle out of it that way. You owe a forfeit, and by the first toe nail of the famed ali, you're going to pay it. Come along with me and get it over with."

Carolyn hung back, with renewed giggles, but she was like a wisp of straw in the powerful grasp of Bob, who rushed her up the steps and into the house before we fairly knew that she was gone.

"What's he goin' to do with her?" Junior piped, but Rod laughed scornfully.

TALKS AS MAN OF WORLD

"Aw, you goof!" he said, with the air of a wearied man of the world. "Whatdyuh suppose he's goin' to do with her? Kiss her, of course, until she yells for him to quit."

I shot a quick glance around, and was relieved indeed to find that Helena and Sam Brixton, together with the Braithwaites, had gone on into the house. I did not know just what Helena Brixton's reaction would be to this naive comment upon her daughter, although she understands the younger generation as well as any other person possibly can.

But Dicky's elder sister, Harriet Braithwaite, and her distinguished surgeon husband, Edwin, have never had any children of their own, and they had been hopelessly bewildered, though infinitely patient and loving, at the vagaries of their orphaned niece, Mary, and her three brothers, Henry, William and Roderick, when the death of both Harriet's sister and brother-in-law in an automobile accident gave the Braithwaites the opportunity for vicarious parenthood. I knew that they would have been shocked at Roderick's comment, and I was glad indeed that they had not overheard it.

REMARK AMUSES ALL

There was no one else on the moonlit lawn who was anything else but amused at the crass speech to which Roderick had given utterance.

"Come, boys!" Marion's voice struck in peremtorily. "We'd better get going, if we expect to get you filled up before you hit the hay."

She moved toward them, and Ronald hastily followed her.

"May I help you?" he asked, and Marion dimpled and smiled.

"If you like," she said, and Ronald's low, earnest reply floated back to us as they climbed the veranda steps together.

"You know I wouldn't like anything else," he said. Only when they were safely out of hearing did Harry Underwood release the laugh that he had been choking back ever since Roderick's contribution to the gayety of nations.

"There's so much romance in the air tonight," he said, "that anybody's likely to catch it."

Philip Veritzen chuckled.

"I wonder if our missing motorists have been infected," he said.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

How Science Discovers Disease

No one will deny that great advances have been made in the methods of diagnosing the human ailments. The modern physician is equipped with instruments and apparatus which were unheard of a century ago. The discovery of the X-ray machine, flouroscope and other scientific machines has made it possible to detect the nature of ailments quickly and accurately.

Dr. Copeland

It is only within recent years that we have been able to detect certain glandular disturbances by means of a special instrument. This is the basal metabolism machine, and the test is known as taking the "basal metabolism."

By this examination there is determined the rate or amount of energy that the body exerts while at complete rest. It gives an index of the amount of fuel the body burns to keep the heart, lungs and other vital organs of the body working at a minimum rate.

The rate varies in individuals and is definitely influenced by certain diseases, particularly diseases of the glandular system. When the metabolic rate is increased, the condition is spoken of as "high." If the rate is decreased it is spoken of as "low" basal metabolism.

As a rule, the test is made in the morning before food has been taken, and at which time only a minimum amount of exertion has been expended. It is advisable that the patient rest for at least an hour before the test is started. This takes care of the excess energy that has been used in traveling to the doctor's office or hospital where the examination is made.

A successful test can only be obtained if the patient is completely relaxed. Emotional excitement, apprehension or fear, will give a false reading and be misleading.

As soon as the doctor believes the patient is thoroughly relaxed, a mouthpiece is placed over the mouth. The nose is compressed by an applicator that resembles a clothespin. This prevents nasal breathing.

It is essential that all breathing take place through the mouthpiece, which is attached to an oxygen tank. The amount of oxygen consumed per minute is determined by a graphic record on a revolving disk.

In certain diseases, such as disease of the thyroid gland, there may be an increase in the amount of oxygen consumed per minute. Of course, there are certain disturbances of the thyroid gland that lead to a decrease in this consumption and give a different reading. The readings are compared to those of a normal individual of the same height, weight, age and sex. One thing to remember is that a basal metabolism test is not a "cure;" it is one means of determining the cause of a disorder or of confirming a diagnosis.

J. M. Q.—How can I gain weight? 2.—What should a boy 18 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weigh?

A.—Eat plenty of good nourishing food and get plenty of sleep. Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for further particulars and repeat your question. 2—He should weigh about 140 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of this age and height, as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

Miss Elizabeth Kraus, 2 Fetzer street, Mt. Washington, Pittsburgh, was awarded first prizes of $5.00.

Twenty $1.00 prizes were awarded to the following:

Edgar Evans, 911 Martha street, Munhall, Pa.; Vernelle Gratzinger, Box 785, West Smithfield street, Mt. Pleasant, Pa.; Edward Doyle, 6306 Everett street, Pittsburgh; Bessie Bryer, 608 Chess street, Coraopolis, Pa.; Garfield E. Scott, Smithfield, O.; Larry Rossi, Masontown, Pa.; Harry Hobaugh, 729 Eleventh avenue, New Brighton, Pa.; Joseph Schermer, 621 Wallis avenue, Farrell, Pa.; Donald Steele, 108 Patterson avenue, Carnegie, Pa.; Charles Lynch, Newell, Pa.;; Boulton Gelston, Box 174, Torrance, Pa.; Robert Sheets, Rosslyn Farms, Carnegie, Pa.; Edward Smotcha, 722 Ridge avenue, McKees Rocks, Pa.; Ida Martin, 143 Pearl street, Pittsburgh; Edward De Sabato, 432 Ella street, Bloomfield, Pittsburgh; Frank Romano, 426 Dorgan street, Pittsburgh; Henry Solodar, Potomac avenue and Broadway, Dormont, Pa.;; Jack Perry, 2727 Broadway, Dormont, Pa.; John Pluchel, 7708 Snowden street, Pittsburgh, and Alfonso Martino, 4514 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh.

Each installment in "The Lawyer Found Dead" contained a hidden clue. The official solution.

1—Absence of ash-tray from sitting room and discovery of fragment in pantry proves it must have been removed after the death, ostensibly by killer. That eliminates suicide as cause of death.

2—Postmark on letter proves it was delivered to Laura Romaine in her home and she brought it to Jameson's apartment.

3—The scene in the kitchen indicates that there was very likely a reconciliation between Jameson and Miss Romaine. Secret Agent X-9 checked up the lodge memberships of both Jameson and Fowler in the "Lawyers' Who's Who" and found that Jameson did not belong to the lodge whose emblem was on the key ring, but Fowler did.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Thanks for Gift to Baby

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me the correct way to thank a small club I belong to for a gift to my baby . . . should I use a plain white correspondence card or a thank-you card? Please tell me how to word it. D.

Please don't use either a correspondence card of a thank-you card. The ready-made thank-you card isn't in good taste, ever, since the words on these are not our words.

And the correspondence card is too apt to "cramp the style" of a note . . . they aren't used very much these days.

Use letter paper and perhaps you'd like to write something like this:

Dear Mrs. Terris:

May I thank you, and through you, the other members of our Club for the charming and generous thoughtfulness to me and to my new baby? I was very much touched by your goodness, and delighted with the lovley little bonnet that you sent me. My daughter looks very proud and happy when she wears your sweet gift, and I'm sure that she would love to add her thanks and happiness in the gift to my appreciation.

Every good wish to you all, and I do hope that very soon I may have the joy of showing you my new treasure of a daughter.

Faithfully,

Appreciation Gift

Dear Mrs Beeckman:

1—Two weeks ago I obtained a position with the aid of a lady in charge of a governmental employment bureau. After I receive my first salary I would like to get her a little something to show my appreciation. I saw her twice and she was very kind to me. What would you suggest I get her? What wording should be put on my card?

2—Should I deliver the gift personally or have it sent, as she works in the same building with me, but on a different floor? ALICE.

1—I like your generous impulse about this, and I am sure that this kind woman will be very much touched by your thoughtfulness. The "gift" might be a gift of a beautifully-written expression of your gratitude to her she would probably like this the best of all, for we are all touched by fine words of appreciation. Or, if you wish to send something with your letter of thanks—I'd like to have you send a letter of appreciation, rather than a card—choose a book that you are sure she will enjoy or send her one or two plain white handkerchiefs of fine texture, or send her a box of flowers or a box of candy.

2—It would be better, I think, to send the gift.

Now that the United States has recognized Russia, the architects recognized Russia, too, at their soiree charette of 1934 last night in their Latin quarter clubhouse in Charette way in downtown Pittsburgh—and recognized in good American fashion both the emigres and the workers.

A magnificent grand duke—Peter S. Thomson, Pittsburgh architect, other nights—was earning his living last night in royal Russian fashion of today by acting as major domo.

And the Russian peasants had their supporters, too—the orchestra (all architects) wore gay checked gingham Russian smocks, girded about with contrasting gingham. The fire-red and black mustachioed waiters (architects again) were in blouses of checked gingham, too. But their blouses had Buster Brown collars!

Smart Set Appreciates Night of Enjoyment

Representatives of Pittsburgh's smart set—the Junior League sponsored the soiree charette last night and the one tonight, too—had a grand time, and praised everything, the orchestra, the like of which they'd never danced to before; the waiters, the show, and, of course, the clubhouse itself.

For the 1934 charette the Architectural Club has taken unto itself new murals—devastating caricatures of night club characters in France, or anywhere, done by Charles Morris and Stephen D'Amico (more architects).

Quite the largest party there was that including the junior George L. Craigs, the junior James Stuart Browns, J. Stuart Brown, Mrs. George La Branche, of New York, the Alex Hunters, M. S. Quay and Mrs. Ledlie W. Young.

Mrs. Craig wore a white crepe gown, printed with blue daisies with red for accent. A blue velvet sash finished the gown. Mrs. Hunter was in dark red lace, and Mrs. Young wore a striking gown of black and white crepe, printed with a tiny motif, and having a bodice of stiffened black chiffon.

I saw Harriet Fickes, wearing a be-ruffled sapphire blue chiffon gown, sitting at a table with the junior Henry Scotts and Walter Hovey. Mrs. Scott was in white crepe with a velvet wrap of American beauty red.

Striking Gowns Worn By Those Present

A cream lace gown with stiffened ruffles at the shoulders and ruffles cascading in bustle fashion down the back of the skirt was worn by pretty Mrs. Charles Arrott. And she had a tiara of antique gold.

Among the last to arrive were the Theodore F. Smiths. Over her rough blue crepe gown Mrs. Smith wore an interesting swagger-length white satin quilted coat, lined in orange.

Mrs. Jess Griffith (Maddy Vegtel, the writer) arrived with Mrs. Brandon Smith and the R. W. Williamses. At one of the tables I noticed the H. F. Robertsons and the M. A. Powells. Mrs. Robertson chose a cream lace gown, and Mrs. Powell wore bright, sapphire blue satin. And Mrs. Robert W. Schmertz, the artist, I saw dancing. Mr. Schmertz played with the orchestra.

Others reserving tables were the T. J. Michies, the W. Y. Cockens, the G. B. Cards, the J. N. Franklins, the Willard Perkinses with the J. P. Davises and others. And the Stewart Goldsboroughs were there, and more than I have space to mention enjoyed the opening night of the soiree charette of 1934.

Curtis Burton Munson To Marry Today

A wedding planned to take place this afternoon in Chicago is of interest here, for the bridegroom is the grandson of the late Andrew McKee, of Pittsburgh.

The bride is Edith Cummings, of Lake Forest, Ill., who held the national golf championship in 1923. She's also an ardent hunter, having shot game in all parts of the States, Canada and the continent. And she's one of the leaders of Chicago's younger set.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Davis Mark Cummings.

Curtis Burton Munson, of New York and Edmonton, Alberta, is the bridegroom. He's the son of the Robert H. Munsons, of New York. His mother is the former Olivia B. McKee, of Pittsburgh. He's a graduate of Yale, class of 1916, and served as an officer in the World War.

The wedding is to take place this afternoon in the home of the bride's mother, in Chicago.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Continuing the discussion of the bonus from yesterday we would like to print the following information relative to the statement made by Lieut. Guy Griffith, in the hope that veterans will better understand the compensation payment situation.

Beneficiaries, such as widows and children, are not receiving checks. In the next week a questionnaire will be sent out to them that they may prove relationship. Their checks will be mailed after the questionnaires are returned to Harrisburg.

The main thing is PATIENCE. Writing in to Harrisburg inquiring about your check does not speed matters along. When you write it means that clerks who could be handling checks are handling your correspondence, thus causing more delay.

Don't fret because you think that your check got lost in the mail. Those that the postoffice can not deliver will be referred to me and I will announce the names of veterans whose checks we have. We have had three. They were announced and the veterans were found and have received their checks.

That's all for now. The Globe Trotter and the Sun-Telegraph will keep ears to the ground and to the wires for any information that might be of interest to you.

Just remember what Lieut. Griffith said.

"Be patient. You will get your check."

Mark Shields Gives Political Views

Developments of the week in the realm of politics are reviewed over WCAE tonight at 6 o'clock, by Mark Shields, political Editor of the Sun-Telegraph.

The Globe Trotter broadcasts over WCAE at 12:15 p. m.; WJAS at 2:15 p. m. and WCAE at 6:30 p. m.

By AIRCASTER

Baseball is to have a day and a night on the CBS-WJAS network as the 1934 season makes its first impression on the sports world.

In addition to the description of the opening game of the American League between Washington and Boston at Washington in the afternoon of April 16, the chain that night is planning to bring the eight managers of the teams of the National League before its microphones from the four cities in which they open the next day.

They will be requested to say what they think about their prospects for the year.

The weight may be an ounce more or less, but Jimmy, in his exultation announced it as "six pounds, sixteen ounces."

It's a boy, bless his heart—and his mother's.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Action on the McLeod bill to release frozen deposits in Federal Reserve System closed banks will be taken by the sub-committee of the House Banking and Currency Committee on Tuesday, it had been determined today.

The sub-committee of seven members, with Representative Prall (Dem.), of New York, chairman, will meet then to consider testimony taken at extended hearings on the bill.

More than three score witnesses advocated the legislation.

Outstanding among the witnesses was A. Mitchell Palmer, Attorney General in the Wilson administration.

In a letter sent to all members of the House, Representative Weideman (Dem.), of Michigan, ardent advocate of the measure, called attention to Palmer's testimony. He said:

"At the start of hearings held by this committee its members apparently were opposed to the bill, but as the testimony was heard regarding the merits of the bill, I believe that the opinions of these members changed and recommend to you that you read the testimony introduced before this committee. Particularly that or former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer.

"In my opinion the testimony presented demonstrated clearly that the government has a moral obligation to pay the depositors in these banks, because it urged the people to put their money in the banks, although at the same time its agents were fully aware that many of these banks were shaky."

Real Estate Board Flays Rent Decision

In a letter to Eric H. Biddle, State Relief Administrator, the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board yesterday assailed the administration's refusal to pay any kind of rent for welfare tenants, terming it "confiscation of property."

Junior Patrol

Here's a really good idea for any Junior Patrol Club, fellows!

Why not start a garden and raise both flowers and vegetables? Even if your garden is only a small one, in someone's backyard, you can have lots of fun raising flowers of your very own. And it will make you mighty proud, fellows, when you can each of you take home a bouquet of pretty flowers.

And it doesn't cost much. The first thing is to get a place for your garden or flower bed. Surely you can find someone who will let you have a garden on some vacant land, and especially if you live out in the country.

Get some seeds and plant them the way the directions with them say, and take care of them all summer long until they grow up into beautiful flowers. Of course, it's a good idea to get flowers that bloom at different times so that all your flowers don't bloom at once.

Everybody in the club should do his share of work taking care of the club garden. You have to keep the weeds cut away, and the ground loosened so that the rain and sun will do their best for the seeds. And you have to guard your plants against insects. Maybe later in the summer it will be dry, too, so that it will be necessary to carry water to the plants.

Now here is a letter from Theresa Moneck, of 1011 Epiphany street, Pittsburgh. She writes:

"We are making up a club of 10 members and we are going to call it the Junior Patrol Club. We would like to have 10 membership cards and 10 buttons. Enclosing eight membership blanks and two copies of it."

Who has been elected captain of your club, Theresa? If you will write and tell us we will send an armband. Also we are always interested in hearing what you plan to do to have fun and help others this spring and summer.

Today we have another letter from Capt. James Cotter, of 515 Glasgow road, Wilkinsburg, Pa. He writes:

"Our club is going to have our fourth meeting at 2 p. m., early because we have no school. We are going to have night school from 6:45 p. m. to 8:45 p. m. April 5. We now have 19 members in our club counting the new pledge I am sending you today. Our club is getting along fine."

And you bet we are glad to hear it, James. Best of luck.

Sheer Frocks, Suits for Warm Spring Days

There is an interesting mixture of internationalism in the navy blue spring street costume sketched here. The hat is a direct gift from Mexico, made of fine Baku, banded with a pinkish scarf of organza. Moreover, it is put on over a coiffure braided and coiled Indian fashion. The frock shows a leaning toward Russian design with its one-sided closing and broad belt, though the jabot and cuff ruffles of fagoted pale pink sheer are our own idea. The big buttons are rose quartz, and the rever can be slipped from them to show the pink vestee. The coat line skirt is unusually slimming.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THIS COSTUME was chosen to show off new hat and hair lines at the annual International Beauty Convention. Despite the severe tailored, soft afternoon and everyday casualness—the coiffures demonstrated with it are all curled and feminine. The big sombrero is shown as a becoming model to poise over coronet braids.

Not a close-sheared bob was shown at the convention: on the contrary, heads that had naturally close-lying hair were titivated with little false bangs, cheek curls and braids to give them an illusion of soft profusion. Even the most elaborate coiffures kept to this natural effect.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

Hoover Candidacy No Factor in G. O. P. Plans

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The real reason Mr. Hoover made that western tour was to find out what he should do.

He wanted to learn what the West thinks. You will see the result in his actions during the next 30 days.

One of two developments is coming? (A) A statement from Mr. Hoover, or (B) reorganization of the Republican National Committee through resignation of Chairman Sanders. As a matter of fact both developments may come. It is only a question of time.

At least that is the confidential interpretation which has reached the inner conservative council of the party here.

MOTIVES

The way Mr. Hoover's friends put it in whispers is this:

He feels a certain responsibility to pass the leadership of the party on to the right people. He appointed Mr. Sanders, and Mr. Sanders will remain there until Mr. Hoover gives the word.

The present is probably not the best time to act. Councillors here are against doing anything until the congressional primaries are over. Also, they feel somewhat at sea because they are not being properly consulted.

ASPIRATIONS

Presidential candidacies are only indirectly involved.

As a matter of fact, if the nominating convention were held today, the nominee probably would be James Wadsworth, of New York. A mouth-to-mouth Republican campaign for him is being carried on so quietly you can only hear the vast echo of it. Preliminary organization work has started for him in many states, such as Kansas. The Curtis people there like him. He is daily making himself more and more personally popular with the regular Republicans of the House, although he breaks into print but little.

The talk for him is based on the fact that he was not mixed up in the 1932 debacle, that he is from Roosevelt's state, a conservative, a wet and level-headed

The Conservatives are using him to head off the Progressives.

There is no Hoover renomination talk anywhere.

SECRET

Four of Mr. Roosevelt's associates are going to get a surprise when his new book comes out shortly. He let them see all except the last chapter before the book went to the printers.

The reason he kept that chapter secret is that in that chapter he paid an unusual tribute to them: Prof. Moley, Louis Howe, Steve Early and Marvin McIntyre.

It may stop that old gossip about dissension in the secretariat. The only change that has occurred on the inside there is due to the illness of Howe and the necessity that he curtail his work.

Also it will probably result in a flock of reports that Prof. Moley is ace high again. Such reports will be sponsored by those who did not know that he has been ace high right along. There has been no change in his status as presidential adviser, except that relinquishment of his State Department post enabled him to move with greater freedom.

MAGIC

The Japanese are great magicians in diplomacy as well as in fact.

Their latest was to call in all foreign journalists in Tokio and announce that their government had no confirmation of reports from London that the United States had asked Britain to exchange views on the 1935 naval conference. It was the first any one had ever heard about that.

Our officials saw the trick in it. Japan wants us to initiate naval discussions and her Foreign Office invented the reports to prod us.

We have not CONSULTED BRITAIN.

The truth is we want someone else to take the initiative. We are not going to take up that thankless burden.

INSULT

If tariff bargaining never does anything else, it did catch Sam Insull.

Our international mind readers say that is the inside story of why Turkey was so anxious to be helpful. The Turks are one of the few people who buy more here than they sell, which puts them in a good position to bargain. They had already let us know they would like to sell more raisins, figs, tobacco, olive oil and hides when Insull was nearing their shores.

The Turks did not even wait until they had ratified their extradition treaty with us before grasping Slippery Sam. They acted outside the treaty under a law of their own which says they can nab any foreign fugitive as "a gesture of friendship."

The State Department was still at a loss to know how to proceed officially when the Turks suddenly told them Insull was awaiting their disposal. Insull's attorneys tried to appeal, but the court held that its decision was not a verdict, but a statement of fact, and therefore could not be appealed.

Turkey will get prime consideration when the tariff bargaining begins.

VETS, SCOUTS IN RUSHMORE CONTEST

Detailed participation plans for two prominent organizations—aggregating total membership of almost 25,000—were being completed today so the members will have the distinction of actively taking part as separate units in the Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition.

The organizations are the Veterans of Foreign Wars throughout Western Pennsylvania and the four Boy Scouts of America councils in Allegheny County which will conduct a combined competition. Complete information will be announced in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

As thousands of citizens in the tri-state district participate through organization units, equal numbers are seeking to write a 600-word text that will proudly tell the history of their country. Some person will write a text in the competition being conducted by the Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers to form the basis of an inscription on the South Dakota mountainside that is being carved into a national monument. Every person has an equal chance. The rules, awards and necessary details will be printed in tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph. They should be clipped for reference purposes by all participants.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 7.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Can't bring Insull back yet. I see by newspapers today, where he hasn't finished his memoirs.

N. Y. Stock Exchange is having their own investigation; they are investigating 14 different stocks that have been acting so funny that Wall street itself didn't know what they were doing. In other words, you can fool the public, but you mustn't fool the members of the lodge.

The high income tax come pretty near passing Thursday in the Senate. Only lacked about six votes. So it won't be long now. Well, there is millions and millions that are not making it, that would be glad to give up 99 per cent if you would let 'em earn a hundred thousand or more.

Yours, WILL.

THE BREWING INDUSTRY DOES ITS PART IN THE MARCH TOWARD BETTER TIMES

One Year Ago Today, thanks to a courageous president and sound thinking members of Congress, the legal sale of pure, wholesome beer was authorized.

The brewing industry has led the way, in the past year, in the march toward better times by providing employment, directly and indirectly, for millions of workers.

In addition to a quarter million brewery workers who regained employment, millions of men in other industries were helped. Farmers, miners, steel workers, transportation workers, building tradesmen, metal tradesmen, glass workers and countless others shared in the business revival led by the brewing industry.

In the last nine months of 1933 the industry paid our national government $105,000,000 in taxes. It is estimated that this year it will pay $175,000,000 in revenue taxes.

On this first anniversary of the return of beer the Fort Pitt Brewing Company renews its pledge to cooperate in every way possible in the movement toward better times. And to the public we pledge maintenance of those quality standards which have made Fort Pitt beer and ale leaders in the Pittsburgh district.

Hollywood Rackets

Fame in Hollywood automatically makes the star the target for many chisels and rackets . . . Some of them are serious attempts to milk, "clip" and "take" the in-the-money natives out of tidy sums . . . Most, however, are penny-ante and may be laughed off easily . . . Begging fan letters furnish the heaviest amount of chiselry, but they are the easiest to ignore . . . And these missives contain requests for everything from the silk stockings Jean Harlow wore in her latest picture to $20,000 from Mae West to pay off the mortgage on the old homestead, etc.

Because the addresses of the stars are kept secret as possible, wily solicitors have been forced to invent an almost fool-proof method of getting the home numbers . . . They call the studio and ask for the actress . . . "This is the So-and-So Florists calling, Miss Crawford. We have some flowers for you to be delivered to your home. What is the correct address, please?" . . . The next morning five muggs "working their way through college" are on Joan's doorstep, pestering her to buy magazine subscriptions.

Another chisel is the free lot racket . . . Either by phone or letter, the player is congratulated on being the winner of a beautiful plot of ground in "Aggravation Acres," the new sub-division . . . The player is told that he (or she) was picked in a "popularity contest" and the lot is free of charge . . . Will he kindly come down and sign the transfer papers? . . . What the star doesn't know until it is too late (in most cases) is that there are fees for this and charges for that, and assessments and expenses on other items, until he has paid out about $5,000 for a small piece of ground that isn't worth more than 50 smackers.

Then there are some motor cops in the tinier towns near Hollywood, who have a few remunerative rackets . . . Recognizing the car of a celeb, they trail it at a discreet distance, ever watchful for some minor infraction . . . If one occurs, the cop is right there, ready to scribble out a ticket . . . But if he lets it be known casually that he's got a day off soon, and if any speed cops are needed as atmosphere in the celeb's current picture (at about $25 a day), well, he will be very much obliged, times being what they are.

Another racket used by the same group is to give frequent benefits and solicit personages for advertisements in the program—assuring them that if these are taken, all the brother cops will be sure to see them and be lenient with speeding advertisers.

Which they never are.

Then there's a movie writer known as a "one-plot man" who sold the same plot to three different studios so far . . . All he does is change the title and the names of the characters . . . For he knows that the movie factories will so hack, mutilate, change and alter the yarn—that the three finished products will have no similarity.

An ambitious inventor, racket-minded, saw his dreams of millions nipped in the bud when all the studios prohibited him from using a double exposure photographic device which would make pictures of tourists shaking hands with Clark Gable—holding an arm of Garbo—embracing Mae West, or sitting at Norma Shearer's tootsies . . . All of this was to be done by a camera trick, but the studios refused to encourage it.

Two writers almost got away with a frame-up at a studio's expense . . . One had a good yarn, but feared he wouldn't get what it was worth from a studio . . . So he had another scribbler put the same title on to a hasty concoction and register the result . . . Consequently when No. 1 sold his story to a studio, and it was announced in the trade press, writer No. 2 came forth and protested the use of the title, arguing that it belonged to him . . . And, if it were used, he demanded some cash, or he would sue, etc . . . But the studio learned in time that the two writers planned to share the title money and simply changed the title, thus out-smarting the plotters.

Which brings to mind a racket worked by some producers . . . When preview comment on a picture is so bad that the studios cannot "take it," they simply change the title of the picture, hoping thus to wipe the slate clean . . . But it doesn't make the reels of tripe any better.

Many casting office people have all their dental work done free by a certain Hollywood tooth-yanker . . . He is glad to tear up their bills . . . Because when a new player or recruit from the stage is considered, one of the chief faults to be found is "uneven molars" . . . And guess who is recommended as the dentist to straighten them out or provide new bridgework?

A trick worked around the smaller studios, where the walls are about as thick as paper, is performed constantly by cheap agents . . . Bending an ear toward a casting conference, the agent hears that Reggie de Courtney is the man they want for a role . . . Quickly, a cheapie scuttles out to a phone and calls Reggie, the actor, telling him that he has a part all lined up for him, and that the studio will phone him about it soon. Thus the chiseler cuts in on 10 per cent of the ham's wage.

Some studios sand-bag their employes, from the stars down, into attending the gala premieres of their attractions, just to make a good showing and a full house. . . . There are schools and bureaus in Hollywood pretending to teach screen acting and writing—and you can write your own ticket regarding them, of course . . . And the benefit performances that stars are called on to attend, where the promoter gets the greater portion of the receipts, are just as numerous in Hollywood as on Broadway . . . Some stars absolutely refuse to sign autograph books, fearing that their signatures may get on contracts and checks without their knowledge. . . . One of the great reasons why stars have managers and personal representatives as well as bodyguards and secretaries is to shield them from rackets, old and new, that are continuously springing up in that mad sector.

But at least one star isn't afraid of rackets, in fact, he's turned Hollywood racketeer himself . . . He is young, handsome and popular with fans, and is flooded with letters from everywhere requesting his photograph . . . The letters contain dimes sent to cover the postage, mailing, etc. . . . Well, our good-looking young hero carefully takes all the dimes out of the letters and then uses the fan mail to start his log fire.

New Shearer Film Drama In Penn

By MICHAEL SHAW

Norma Shearer returns to the screen after 18 months' absence in a sophisticated comedy-drama, "Riptide," and yesterday's audiences in the Penn found it a delight.

The picture is swift-moving and smart. It abounds in clever dialogue, much of it the "clipped" kind so greatly in vogue; and it rejoices in an expert cast. When you have mentioned Herbert Marshall, Robert Montgomery, and Mrs. Patrick Campbell (in a most successful screen debut), you have only started to call the roll of the fine players who take part.

Miss Shearer is a gay New York lady, with a past far from spotless; Mr. Marshall a titled visitor from England. They meet by accident and have an affair, and when His Lordship must sail back home, he finds himself unable to leave his love. So he marries the girl.

Five happy years pass in Lord Marshall's ancestral home and a lovely little girl is growing up in the nursery when complications arise. His Lordship goes to America again on business, leaving Lady Shearer behind.

Enters Mrs. Pat Campbell, an Alison Skipworth type of grande dame, playing an aunt of Marshall's; she is all for life and laughter and gaiety, and she carries off our slightly neglected heroine to Cannes for a good time.

Here the Lady encounters her old friend, Robert Montgomery, an eternally drunken New York playboy of considerable charm. After a roaring party, Mr. Montgomery follows Lady Shearer to her hotel and is injured in a plunge from the balcony outside her room. There is a terrific scandal. Lord Marshall returns in a state aptly described by a New York tabloid as "burned up." He plans a divorce, then weakens, summons his wife to him, and apologizes for doubting her.

The Lady forgives and returns to her husband. Unfortunately, she has made a misstep with Mr. Montgomery during the estrangement. For Marshall's sake and for the sake of their child, she determines to lie about it, but the truth is forced from her in a dramatic meeting of the three principals.

This time the divorce goes through—almost. For when the unhappy pair meet for the last time to arrange a financial settlement, they fall into each other's arms. And you may be sure the little child plays its usual part in this happy denouement.

Miss Shearer is at her best throughout the play—alive, alert and attractive. Mr. Marshall is suave and suffering, as always. Mr. Montgomery plays the cheerful wastrel with his accustomed verve. But our personal choice for the honors is Mrs. Campbell, who turns in a thorough and convincing job of acting.

Also on the Penn's bill are a "Goofy Movie," a Hearst Metrotone newsreel, a cartoon comedy and a travelogue.

Heavy Drama In Davis

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Two pictures, one having striking dramatic force, and the kind of acting that is needed to bring it out, the other a run-of-the-mine programmer, are on view in the Davis and Regent. The first is "Success at Any Price," a screen adaptation of John Howard Lawson's powerful play, "Success Story." This is hearty fare—no pink tea soiree—and its acid taste may not be to the liking of all. It carries a tragic theme to a bitter end.

The story, briefly, is that of a youth who has had no advantages. Through his fiancee he obtains work in the firm employing her. Money is his goal—money and position—a place of eminence that will put him above "college boys" he loathes. He achieves his goal, even to the extent of discharging from the firm the man who employed him, but never obtains love, because he makes the mistake of thinking that it can be bought.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., plays this role with steely hardness. Frank Morgan is top actor with a suave portrayal as the head of the firm. Colleen Moore makes a nice comeback as the sweetheart who is forgotten, and Genevieve Tobin does good work in a siren role.

The second feature, which has William Gargan and Marian Nixon in the leads, shows the inside of the fur-stealing racket under the title of "The Lineup." It is not particularly distinguished, but is interesting.

Bugle Corps to March To Fulton Tonight

Several organizations of veteran soldiers have made arrangements to attend the showing of "Forgotten Men," World War motion picture in the Fulton. First will be the Drum and Bugle Corps of Allegheny County Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars, tonight. The corps will parade through downtown streets and arrive at the Fulton Theater at 8 o'clock.

Oriental Toe Dancer Variety Feature

Darlin Lucky, Oriental toe dancer, and Frances McAvoy, on a return engagement, will head the cast of "Jazztime Revue," which opens in the Variety Sunday with a midnight show. "Jazztime Revue" is in two acts and 40 scenes.

Tiny "Ginger" Huff and Mary Joyce are to be held over from this week.

Hospital Life In Warner

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Extra! All about life in a big city hospital. No new or startling revelations in "Registered Nurse" in the Warner this week. Just a highlight visual and auditory recital of what every nurse and doctor knows about hospital routine.

Bebe Daniels, looking very charming most of the time in a white uniform, is the "registered nurse," whose sympathetic, firm, bedside manner exerts an overpowering influence over patients and doctors alike. They're all in love with her, some for better or worse.

Chief among the contenders for her heart and hand are Lyle Talbot, promising young surgeon, and John Halliday, not so young but with promises fulfilled. There is a mentally affected erstwhile brutal husband in the offing to complicate the love interest, and a big-shot fight-promoting patient who settles the husband situation in his own un-subtle way.

"Registered Nurse" is a little of this and a little of that—a tear here, a laugh there. The tear is not very salty and the laugh is not very loud. There is a policeman boy friend of one of the nurses who dies a noble death with an outlaw's bullet in his heart. Pittsburgh's Vince Barnett is a comic orderly. Telephones and buzzers are always interrupting romantic declarations. And so life in the big city hospital goes on.

Better than the feature picture, is the remainder of the program with the golden voiced Ruth Etting singing songs of the '90's in "The Derby Decade," a Vincent Lopez short musical feature, an animated Amos 'n' Andy cartoon, "The Lion Tamer" and Pathe news.

HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, April 7.—Hollywood's famous melting pot, from which men and women of many nations and vocations are spilled out to seek fame and fortune in the movies, has just presented another—a former national champion discus thrower, John Anderson, once Cornell University's six-foot pride and joy on the athletic field.

For nearly four months, John, formerly a classmate of the now successful Franchot Tone, has been secretly taking dramatic lessons from Oliver Hinsdell, M-G-M coach, and he has so impressed executives that his first role will be an important one in "Treasure Island." He will portray Harry Sykes, a vicious buccaneer in the noted pirate yarn with Wally Beery and Jackie Cooper for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Folks around the Culver City film factory claim John is headed for the top. Watch him.

Twelve years ago Colleen Moore was one of the original Wampas baby stars. For her outstanding work she was given an achievement award—and so, again to honor her, the current crop of Wampas baby stars created a new position for her—that of being "big sister."

Colleen has just returned to town, and is ready for more film work.

Wanderings around Hollywood . . . This will surprise you no end! Back in 1912 Joseph M. Schenck played a captain of the Northwest Mounted Police in "Pierre of the Plains," a melodramatic picture Edgar Selwyn directed. . . Olsen and Johnson, those nutty comics, are hereby issuing a formal (Tish, tish!) challenge to any team of comedians to a meat-ball rolling contest. They claim to be the world's champs. . . Marcia Remy, casting director Dan Werner's secretary, is playing a secretary on the screen for Universal. . . Creighton Chaney, still refusing to trade upon his late father's name and use "Lon Chaney, Jr.," as a screen monicker, found it tough sledding until RKO signed him for "The Life of Vergie Winters," starring Ann Harding. . . King Levinsky, the hysterical fisticuffer, is in town to do squared-circle battles and to attempt a movie debut.

Ruth Chatterton first thought of skipping off to Europe to get a "new lease on life—or romance," but with no less than six offers for roles in Hollywood, the first lady of the talkies is coming back to heartbreak town to "begin all over again!"

Fleeson Tunes In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Introduced in a novel way, its opening numbers effective, its climax smart, "Dancing Honeymoon" in the Pitt drags more than it should with the fault not in the settings and details, but in some performances that don't always shine too brightly.

The theme melody of the show is the tuneful "Dancing Honeymoon," which you'll likely be hearing plenty, just as you've heard any number of other lyric successes that Neville Fleeson, Pittsburgh composer of the song has written for more than one musical comedy hit.

Best of them all, on the stage and a truly lovely best, is graceful Helene Denizon, whose dancing is a delight to watch. "Joan of Arc" unusual and finished, is her special offering. Not so good, though featured as the "Colonel of American Nuts," is Frank Libuse, his slapstick, directed chiefly at warbling Myrtle Lansing, again and again slipping into the very ordinary.

Clowning Charles Masters, who drums melodies on whatever is at hand, be it a chair or a musician's head, provides a better laugh in his clever sort of way. So do overgrown Nord and baby-doll-sized Jean in a skit of musical nonsensity.

Evangelist Aimee enters in the scheme of amusement, too, when Lillian Dawson does a clicking blues-take-off on one of Sister Aimee's extorting moods.

Heroic and one pained close-up after another make up the parts of Ralph Forbes an Adrienne Ames in the "Avenger," a very inane movie of the revenge of a young assistant district attorney who has been framed.

Mamie Smith Gets Married

MAMIE SMITH was married recently to a gentleman no more important than are most bridegrooms at a wedding ceremony. The wedding was large, impressive and well attended. May I present you with a few reactions? . . .

* * *

THE BRIDE'S MOTHER: Oh, I'm so happy! My little girl is getting what every woman wants; a good husband and a home of her own. I'm so glad for her! Now there'll be no more dirty digs from the neighbors.

I guess this shows them. I guess they see now he really meant business. Although it did look for a while as though she'd never get him. . . .

* * *

A NEIGHBOR: So she got him at last. He's an anemic-looking specimen, if you ask me. He doesn't hold a candle to my Sally's John. Thank God, I won't have to listen to any more about Wilfred and Mrs. Smith. You'd think Mamie was the only girl in the world who ever got married.

Well, I suppose she deserves him. God knows she worked hard enough to get him. . . .

* * *

THE BRIDE'S FATHER: One more gone. Pretty soon there'll be nobody left but me and Ma. Still, it's one less mouth to feed. Unless he's got ideas about coming back to live with us. If he has, I'll soon let him know what's what.

Gosh, the money this has cost me. Flowers, reception, clothes. How I'm ever going to pay for it all, I don't know. At least, I'm giving her the best of everything. No one can say that I haven't done things up right. . .

* * *

THE GROOM'S MOTHER: I wonder if they'll have anything decent to drink. I should have brought along my own. It'd be just like Smith, the old tightwad, not to serve anything. I bet he didn't spend fifty bucks on the whole affair. . .

* * *

THE BEST MAN: Boy, that blonde bridesmaid is a sweet number. Wonder what she'd say if I asked her to go out with me?

Gee, I hope Wilfred didn't say anything about my wife. Glad the little woman's away visiting her old lady . . .

* * *

THE BRIDEGROOM: Good Lord, I never felt like this before. I'm shaking all over. What if I'm making an awful mistake?

I never was so keen on getting married. It was only those dirty looks her old man kept giving me. He's smiling now, though. I wonder why? . . .

* * *

THE BRIDE: I'm so happy! Dear, dear Wilfred! His love for me simply shines right out of his eyes. And all these lovely people! So many of them, and such dear friends.

They're all watching me. They love me, too, all of them. They're all wishing me happiness, the dear, lovely people! . . .

Death Walks On Stanley Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Death Takes a Holiday," which, as a stage play, was a delightful poetic fantasy of subtle beauty, having a dream-like eerie quality into which was intermixed a dash of melodramatic fright, manages to hold most of its allure and atmosphere in the photoplay version that is now on view in the Stanley. It is acted with much fidelity by Fredric March, in the principal role of Prince Sirki, and with delicate charm by Evelyn Venable, who is the physical personification of the beautiful Grazia, and convincingly suggests that essential ethereal aura that must register more as an emanation than a characteristic and does.

"Death Takes a Holiday" was a truly fine play and the screen production of it is comparable to it in all respects, artistically, except the opening, which is hokumized to make visible things that are merely mentioned in the play, but are mentioned in such a way that escapes from death in automobiles appear much more impressive when whispered of in awed tones than they do in the visualized crashes that the screen employs. All of the brooding air and ominous moonlight effects are thus lost, but eventually the movie gets into the mood of the play and thereafter it is a thing of real dramatic beauty.

The story is that of Death becoming a mortal, taking abode in the body of a Prince Sirki, who has passed on. He wants to find out why mortals fear him—and to learn something about this thing called love. He allows himself three days, during which there is no death, but terror nevertheless grips the household into which he forces himself as a guest. Others, without knowing the reason, shun him after single experiences, but Grazia is attracted to him, and when he goes back to his shadows, she willingly accompanies him.

While it is extremely fantastic and unreal it is made credible, and it is gripping in its tenseness.

Of course, the setting is as beautiful as the lords of Hollywood could make it, and the marvels of photography make the illusion of the shadowy phase of Death's visit perfect—an actual picturizing of a bodyless transparent form moving and speaking. That little trick alone is worth seeing. Much more so the entire photoplay.

New Falstaff Does Well At Tech

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Mr. Seibel

Just as Carnegie Tech Drama School discovered a mighty good Hamlet a few years ago in Hardie Albright, so it looks as if they had discovered a mighty good Falstaff in Franklin Heller. He has been playing the Fat Knight in the first part of "Henry IV," and on April 16 the second part is to be presented, leading up to the birthday of Shakespeare on April 23. During that week the two parts will be presented on alternate nights.

When I saw the performance, Donald Gallagher acted Hotspur with fine effect and Carl Dozer lent glamor to Glendower. The whole production in the Elizabethan manner showed the genius of B. Iden Payne as director.

Tonight the freshmen of the drama department will put on "John Kemp's Wager," by the poet, Robert Graves, with folk dances and songs.

Two interesting productions are to be put on this coming week. The Calvary Masquers present "In Times Square," a mystery play, in the Parish House on Shady avenue—in the cast are Howard Blaine, Ruth Simpson, William Rau, Kirk Gilmore, Hays Long, Keith Stirling, Ralph Radcliffe, E. P. Rafferty, Marie Mulhollan and Ralph Wilson. There will be three performances, April 10-12, and on the same evenings the Experimental Theater in Aiken avenue puts on "The Fifth Personality," a three-act play by Kilburn Blaisdell, and "Eleanora's Portrait," in one act, by Sarah C. Pettit.

The present week has seen interesting events besides the Falstaffian gambols at Tech. The Golden Triangle Players give the last of their Saturday morning children's plays at the Twentieth Century Club—"The Little Red-Headed Princess," by Sarah C. Pettit and Sophie G. Keenan. At the East Liberty Y good audiences and a good performance are reported for "It Happened in Hollywood." The Community Players in Braddock showed up well in "Hay Fever."

So everybody is now waiting for the tenth annual contest of the Drama League, during the last week of April.

Lavagetto as Regular
Not First Quick Jump
Pitching Worries Cubs

Fates Jolt Red Sox
Kaplan Defends Stroke
Ice Pilot Never Player

Reports from the front that Cookie Lavagetto has been definitely selected as the regular second baseman of the Pirates still lack official confirmation by Manager George Gibson, and possibly Gibson will not make known his final decision until shortly before the opening of the season. For the Buc pilot has not forgotten the brilliant work of Tommy Thevenow at the keystone station in the closing stages of the 1933 race, and may yet decide to start Thevenow and let Lavagetto watch a few pennant games from the dugout before sending in the 19-year-old Coast recruit as a regular.

Cookie Lavagetto

But daring as it would be to turn the job over to Lavagetto at the hop-off, in view of Cookie's youth and limited experience, there is no good reason why the move should not prove successful. The rookie who can jump in and hold down a major league infield berth immediately is an exception, yet the trick has been done often enough to indicate a chance for Lavagetto. Frankie Frisch, at 20, stepped from college right into a regular position in the big show. Arky Vaughan did it at the same age after only one year in the minors. So did Ralph Kress. Joe Sewell and Marty McManus became regulars after less than a season in the minors. Rabbit Maranville had only a year and a half of service in the sticks, and Woody English only two years. Lavagetto shows just as much promise now as did any of those others mentioned who became regular infielders at the first try.

PITCHING STAFF WORRIES BRUIN BOSSES

The Cub machine in the main has lived up to paper promise in the spring games. It is a fine club, with plenty of power. Chuck Klein is not the only helpful addition, for Tuck Stainback looks like one of the best new outfielders of the year. He has speed, hustle, a good arm and is hitting well, and if the leg that was injured early in the practice sessions does not go wrong again, the youngster may make it difficult for Babe Herman and Riggs Stephenson to keep him out of a regular job. The bosses are worried about their pitchers, however.

As things stand now, the only sure standbys in the hurling branch are Lonnie Warneke and Guy Bush, with Bud Tinning as the next best bet. Charley Root and Pat Malone are ageing, and the management would feel much safer if it had capable youngsters to replace them in case of a slip. The main hopes in the latter direction are Bill Lee and Roy Joiner, the latter a southpaw. Lee has been held back by illness, and while Joiner has done fairly well, it is said he has nothing but a curve ball and may not be so hot during the regular season, though in their desperation for a left-hander the Cubs will have to hang on to him. In a last effort to bolster the staff, Scout Jack Doyle was left on the Coast to comb that region again for a hurler who may be able to win in the National League.

RED SOX OPTIMISM REPLACED BY GLOOM

The lavish expenditure of money does not always assure success in baseball. Since taking over the Red Sox, Tom Yawkey has spent a fortune for new players and a new park layout in Boston, but now it looks as though only the remodeled Fenway Park will come up to expectations. The prospect that all those new seats will be filled often is not overly encouraging, for spring training developments have caused gloom to replace the optimism that prevailed in Bosox circles when the squad started South.

Tom Yawkey

The failure of Lefty Grove to get going on account of a sore arm, real or imaginary, was the hardest blow. Dusty Cooke was stopped by a shoulder injury after a brilliant start. Bill Cissell's throwing arm went back on him. Weiland and Rhodes are the only pitchers ready. The hitting of the club has been weak, and the showing in general far from impressive. Counting Grove only as an individual factor, the loss of that ace would have been a terrific blow in itself, but the effects extend much farther, as with Lefty on the shelf the entire club is deprived of a source of inspiration and is thrown into the dumps. Things may look up if Grove recovers quickly, but at present the Red Sox, instead of being a club of potential greatness, are a club of serious doubt. The most liberal spender sometimes gets the worst breaks.

INSISTS SWIM STROKE IS WITHIN RULES

Lester Kaplan, captain of the swimming team of City College of New York, remains undisturbed by the complaints against his interpretation of the breast stroke, and refuses to yield to the purists who hold his style to be illegal and say he looks like a porpoise. The controversy has reached such a point that it may be carried to the A. A. U. national powers.

Kaplan says he understands the rules to demand that the arms be shot forward full length until the hands touch. He does that, he explains, but instead of pushing through the water he raises his body out of the tank, getting freedom from resistance and greater speed. After his hands touch before his uptilted face, he swings his arms back in an arc almost to his sides, and then moves them forward again. Kaplan insists that the rules do not require that the arms stay in the water and declares he will get the world record he seeks for 100 meters unless the A. A. U. bans the stroke very soon.

NEVER PLAYED BUT BUILDS ICE WINNERS

It is not easy to conceive that a man who never played hockey in his life could have the skill and knowledge of technique to develop and handle title-contending clubs in the ice sport, but that is true of Thomas Patrick Gorman, manager of the Chicago Black Hawks, who are now two games ahead of the Detroit Red Wings in the final round of the playoffs for the Stanley Cup and the world championship. Gorman is one of sportdom's outstanding oddities to demonstrate that playing experience in a game is not always necessary to qualify a man for successful leadership.

Tom Gorman

This Ottawa Irishman started as a sports writer in his home town, but eventually was cured. One day he took over the managership of the Ottawa Senators. The other hockey managers were stunned. Here was a man who had never played hockey. He had never had a hockey stick in his hands. One irate manager exploded, "Why, that so-and-so can't even skate." But Gorman did so well he advanced to the managership of the New York Americans, and in the 1928-29 season he landed that club in second place, losing to the Rangers in the playoffs so narrowly that only one goal was scored in two games. Tom then tried managing a race for a time, but came back to hockey and in less than a year did such a remarkable job at building up the Black Hawks that today they need only one more victory in the final round to win the world title.

EL PASO, Tex., April 7.—The Pirates and White Sox carried their diamond warfare into Texas today. The rivals will regale El Paso fans with two battles, the games being scheduled for this afternoon and tomorrow. One year ago the same diamond artists clashed on the local diamond and a goodly crowd was there. Therefore, the traveling athletes expected to be greeted by a large outpouring of fans in both contests slated for the present jaunt.

In picturesque Tucson yesterday, the White Sox defeated the Pirates, 4 to 3, in one of those dime novel finishes. Stanley Bordagaray, the husky little Frenchman, was guilty of a bad piece of fielding on Paul Waner's triple of the eighth that opened the way for a tally that put the Buccos in front, but the Coast League recruit more than atoned for his slip before the battle ended.

The rookie singled in the last half of the ninth after two were out to drive in the winning tally. In the eighth he scored a run that put his club on an even footing with the Pirates, and the fifth he clouted out the only homer of the two-game series. This tally also forced a deadlock. So Stanley had something to write home about last night.

Despite the defeat of the Buccos, they are still out in front of the American Leaguers, as they have won four of the seven games played of the 14 contests scheduled.

Bill Swift is all set to start a contest this afternoon. The Scranton right-hander appears to be rounding into good shape, and the same can be said of Red Lucas, who worked five rounds against the White Sox in the Tucson clash of yesterday. The Nashville veteran had a lot of stuff to show the Fonseca clan. Cy Blanton, who pitched the closing rounds of the fight, also was impressive, yet the St. Joe rookie was charged with the defeat.

George Earnshaw opposed Lucas at the start of the clash, but the former Mackian ace had to retire at the end of the second inning in favor of Gallivan, who pitched cleverly until the close.

Muddy Ruel scored the winning run in the ninth on Bordagaray's hit. Red Kress opened with a hit and Blanton had a brief wild spell as he walked the veteran catcher. Blanton then made a thrilling catch of Gallivan's tap which was supposed to be a sacrifice. Cy turned and threw to Arky Vaughan for a double play. Swanson and Bordagaray, however, had singles in their bats and Ruel was able to get over.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: VICTORIA REGIA—This aquatic flower, which originally came from South America, belongs to a genus of plants of the order of Nymphaeacae and looks like a gigantic water lily. Its orbicular purplish leaves float on the water and attain a diameter of from six to eight feet. Their floating power is so great that they easily will support a man seated on a chair. The seeds, called "water maize," are eaten by the natives of South America. I drew my specimen from life at Buitenzorg, Java. SUNSTROKE VICTIM—To George Gosney, of Bentleyville, Pa., the sub-zero weather of the past winter smacks of the balmy summer breezes, because he felt so warm he wanted to go without a coat. Last summer, Gosney suffered sunstroke and, after recovering, discovered he had developed peculiar reactions to heat and cold. When it gets hot his feet and legs grow numb, but during a bitter cold wave he feels warm and comfortable, even when out in the open.

GREEN, BARTO IN SURPRISE VICTORIES

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

A lot of superlatives are floating around town today as the fight fans fight over among themselves last night's fights in Duquesne Garden.

"The greatest show in years in Pittsburgh."

"Wonderful preliminaries."

Those are just a few, and, my, oh my, how Lew Raymond, the matchmaker, must be blushing as he hears all of the nice things the boys are saying about his handiwork.

That's music to a matchmaker's ears, even such a service-worn veteran as Raymond, who learned the art of making matches in New York and can teach tricks to any and all of them, including the fellows in the biggest promoting jobs.

CROWD RUSHES GATES

Sometimes the only reward a matchmaker gets for his work is the satisfaction of putting on a good show. Lew's had many shows of that type, but last night he felt as well the glow that goes with packing in the fans as the sport was revived following a long lapse in Duquesne Garden, a historic old arena. The boxes and balcony and all floor seats were filled and the customers lined the walls and stood along the bicycle racing track. It looked like a turnout of some 7,000 to 8,000 and receipts in excess of $10,000, but it developed that several large-sized groups had rushed the entrances and the payoff was only around $6,000.

But enough about the superlatives and the crowd and on to the fights. Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, continued his procession toward a battle with Vince Dundee for the world middleweight title at Forbes Field this summer by beating Ben Jeby, of New York, the former champion, in the 12-round windup, but not without a struggle. In fact, as he later admitted in his dressing room, it was one of his toughest fights. Jeby won only three rounds and held his own in another, but he never stopped charging after Teddy and didn't give him a moment in which to relax. The only way Teddy could keep him off was to keep leading at him with zooming rights to the jaw, and even then Ben shook them off, or didn't even bother to do any shaking, and kept charging in again, flailing away.

JEBY FORCES PACE

In the rounds which he won, the sixth, ninth and tenth, and the fifth, in which he held his own, Jeby managed to get to close quarters and score consistently to the body and head, and Teddy had difficulty squelching him. Throughout the bout Yarosz kept circling about the ring and it was by sharpshooting from the outside and scoring clean hits that he built up his victory margin.

Yarosz started slowly and it was not until the last minute of the first round that he began to assert himself. Then a right knocked Jeby back off balance and Teddy went to work to sew up the round.

The next two rounds were fairly tame, with Teddy just outpointing his man. It was not until the fourth round that Yarosz managed to chalk up a big frame and then he did it with a succession of rights and then lefts and then rights again, mixed judiciously to the head and body, which for the first time slowed down the forcing pace of Jeby, who seemed intent upon mauling away inside and wearing down Teddy.

FIFTH ROUND EVEN

CHILLYSAUCE

Red Lucas was strong when he left the mound at the finish of yesterday's clash in Tucson. Red said he could have continued, but he was content to call it a day. Asked if he threw many curves, Lucas replied:

"I've tried to throw quite a few, but I don't think they were good curves. It's a pretty hard thing to make a ball break in that light atmosphere."

Red was a bit puzzled by the long home run sock of the bat of Stanley Bordagday. The little Frenchman hit a ball as high as his hat over the left field wall. He said:

"But maybe that's his alley."

The Pirates and White Sox drew more than 3,000 paid customers in the two games at Tucson. The outpouring of fans in view of conditions is a tribute to the sport's popularity in that section of the Southwest. To date the barnstorming tour has borne good financial returns.

Pie Traynor gladdened the heart of a Pittsburgh girl at Tucson yesterday. She is a young nun of the Pittsburgh Sisters of Charity, who taught school in Hazelwood a few years ago. When a very little girl she often took her sick dad to Forbes Field and herself became a baseball addict. One of her grade school boys of that period wished to have a baseball autographed by Pie Traynor, and the young sister sent the ball to Traynor, who did not receive it. Pie heard the story, went out to the convent on the edge of the desert to visit the sister, and then presented her with a brand new baseball containing the names of all the Pirates.

Al Simmons is one of the greatest and hardest hitters baseball has produced, yet this paragon of consistent swatting has a complex regarding springtime games. He does not hit well, and while some folks think Al's trouble is mental, he tells me there is a physical reason. Simmons says his timing and stride is off in the spring. He said:

"If I were right at the plate I don't think I would let French throw his fast ball by me as he did in Tucson."

Al's side of the argument is backed by his batting mark. He is hitting around .220 for the many games he has played as a part of the preparatory season.

JOCKEY WINS FIVE

BALTIMORE, April 7.—(AP.)—Joe Jacobs, 18-year-old apprentice from New Orleans, booted home five winners at Bowie yesterday for one of the finest riding performances of recent years. Closely pressing Earl Porter in the race for 1934 riding honors, Jacobs chalked up victories in the first two races and then wound up his field day with successive winners in the last three races.

Local Stars Lose In Ping Pong Play

CLEVELAND, April 7.—Herman Snyder, of Pittsburgh, was defeated in the second round of the national amateur ping pong tournament here last night, losing to Al Bokenson, of Cleveland, 21-18, 21-18.

Snyder entered the second round by defeating Reginald Hammond, of Highland Park, N. Y., 21-12, 19-21, 21-19, 21-14.

Al Watson, another Pittsburgher, fell by the wayside, losing to Jerry Glanz, of Cleveland, 21-17, 21-16, 21-19.

KLICK CHALLENGES ROSS

NEW YORK, April 7.—(INS.)—The State Athletic Commission today had on file a challenge by Frankie Klick, of California, for a lightweight title match with Champion Barney Ross, of Chicago. The commission told Klick to post the customary forfeit for weight and appearance and then served notice on Ross to accept the challenge within 30 days.

Culver Poloists Play Here Tonight

Culver Military Academy's maroon-jerseyed poloists lend color to the scene at Hunt Armory tonight as they tackle the Pittsburgh Gunners in the closing battle of the indoor season for both teams. Simultaneously, the Cadets wind up their scholastic polo careers.

The interscholastic champions of 1933, who dropped that title and the Sherman Cup to the Lawrenceville School riders in New York Thursday, bring a classy array of mallet wielders to Pittsburgh on their first visit in two years.

KLAAS BOXES WALCOTT

Curly Klaas, of the North Side, and Floyd Walcott, of Clairton, have been signed to box the second bout on the Joey Pazzone-Tiger Joe Randall card at McKeesport Monday night. There will be two six-round and two four-round preliminaries, in one of which Jack Dalcherone will battle Chuck Mullins.

BOXERS UNCORK KNOCKOUT PUNCHES IN A. M. A. TOURNEY

WALTER MARM SCORES PAIR OF WINS

By JESS CARVER

The Keystone A. C ring last night was no place for the faint of heart or weak of chin. Three welterweights and middleweights had their first-round innings in the annual Allegheny Mountain Association senior boxing championships, and registered no fewer than seven knockouts during a bloody and exciting evening.

Tonight, the way will be cleared for semi-finals in all divisions as the 112, 118, 126 and lightweights resume action after an evening of rest. The lighter lads opened the tournament on Thursday.

CERAR STOPS AUTH

In one of the feature battles of last evening, a Pittsburgh Lyceum favorite stopped entirely too many with his whiskers and wound up with a technical knockout charged against him. Jimmy (Red) Auth, one of Danny Ryan's most promising middleweights, was pitted against rugged, hard hitting Louis Cerar, of St. John's Lyceum. Auth made the mistake of attempting to mix it with Louie, and the result was disastrous, to say the least. Jimmy wobbled to his corner after the first round in bad shape and in the second, was helpless on the ropes when Referee Ernesto Carnegie Sesto stopped the action. Cerar hits hard with both hands and while he leads with his own chin at times, apparently can take it.

Walter Marm, another Lyceum star, turned in a pair of victories. First, he hung a technical knockout on Paul Bailey, of the Radacy A. C., of Brownsville, in three rounds and returned for a second shot to outpoint Johnny Geidl, of the Duerr A. C., in three frames.

ROBINSON ADVANCES

Joe R[illegible], Radacy's crack Negro s[illegible] two pair of triumphs. [illegible] Joe Thomason, of the Emerald A. C., in the third round and won the judges' verdict over Frank McLaughlin, of the Burke A. C., although the crowd heartily disapproved the decision.

Chuck Whiteman, of Bluefield, W. Va., got off to a right auspicious s[illegible] by [illegible] Chalfa, of Canonsburg, on the button in the second round and scoring a technical knockout, but in his second appearance of the evening was himself knocked out by Jimmy Clarke, crack Titusville puncher, in the second frame. Clarke punched holes in Whiteman's mid-section to cause the West Virginian to fold up. The summary:

147-POUND CLASS

Joe Brandon, Superior A. C., won by a technical knockout over Steve Brinzo, Beaver Falls, third round.

Walter Marm, Pittsburgh Lyceum, won by a technical knockout over Paul Bailey, Radacy A. C., Brownsville, first round.

Joe Robinson, Radacy A. C., Brownsville, won by a technical knockout over Joe Thomason, Emerald A. C., third round.

Frank McLaughlin, Burke A. C., McKeesport, defeated George Meyers, Shee A. C.

Charles Whiteman, American Legion, Bluefield, W. Va., won by a technical knockout over Mike Chalfa, Canonsburg, second round.

Walter Marm defeated Johnny Geidl, Duerr A. C.

Steve Walters, unattached, defeated Joe Brandon, Superior A. C.

Joe Robinson, Radacy A. C., Brownsville, defeated Frank McLaughlin, Burke A. C.

Jimmy Clarke, Titusville, knocked out Charles Whiteman, American Legion, Bluefield, W. Va., second round.

160-POUND CLASS

Louie Cerar, St. John's Lyceum, won by a technical knockout over Jimmy Auth, Pittsburgh Lyceum, second round.

John Thomas, Superior A. C., knocked out Virgil Bailey, Radacy A. C., second round.

LOCALS ROLL IN A. B. C.

Le Page, Partner Lead in Bike Race

CLEVELAND, April 7.—(AP.)—The short and sturdy legs of Alfred Letourneur and the persistence of his French partner, Henri Le Page, kept them in the lead today in the six-day bicycle race at Public Hall.

They held the ground they gained in three hours of sprinting last night as the field was reduced to 12 teams. Louis Maitese withdrew because of a leg infection and his partner, Mike De Filippo, teamed with Tony Schaller, whose partner, Charles Panattiere, withdrew because of illness. The standings:

JEBY EXTENDS TED YAROSZ

even, despite a strong finish by Teddy. Jeby's work inside won him the sixth and he was continuing in the seventh until Teddy began to level rights off his chin to win the round. Yarosz again began to finish fast to win the eighth, and Jeby kept so busy plugging away in the next two sessions that he won both of them. Teddy then stepped out to punch his way to comfortable margins in the last two rounds to clinch the fight to the satisfaction of the fans, who let out a roar of approval when the unanimous decision in his favor was announced.

While Teddy admitted Jeby had surprised him with his toughness and ability to stand up under smashing punches to the jaw and the fast pace he forced throughout, Jeby in his dressing quarters paid the local star a high tribute, saying:

"He's a great fighter—a champion. But I'd like to fight him again."

Yarosz weighed 160¼ pounds and Jeby 158¾ at 3 p. m.

THRILLS IN PRELIMS

As pleasing as the main bout proved to be, the preliminaries all but took the play away from it. They were packed with thrills and upsets of the dope. Here's the panorama:

Al Rossi, of Newark, brother-in-law of Champion Dundee, was knocked cold and saved by the bell in the first round of his semi-final with Anson Green, Homestead Negro middleweight puncher, and the referee had to intervene after seven seconds of the second round to save him from further punishment.

Mike Barto, New Kensington southpaw lightweight, came from behind to floor Marty Gornick, of Whitaker, three times and have him out on his feet in the last round of their five-round battle and won the referee's decision over the favorite.

Lloyd Clements, Jeannette heavyweight, bested Carl Montebano, of Braddock, in a rough five-rounder, one of the toughest slugging bees there's been around here in months.

KINGFISH WINNER

Max (Kingfish) Elling, of the Hill, spilled the beans by winning decisively over General Burrows, of Aliquippa, sparring partner of Yarosz, in five rounds, having Burrows almost out in the third.

Joey Adams, of Johnstown, showed a lot of class and right hand punching skill in beating Shorty Washko, Duquesne featherweight, in a rousing five-round opener.

Green's knockout victory (one of two more like this one and he'll be getting a match with Yarosz as a hot local natural) and Barto's finish against the more seasoned Gornick were the two rich spots of the show.

Rossi, Anson's victim not long ago fought a 10-rounder with Yarosz in Newark. He started off like a million dollars against Green, jabbing the Dark Destroyer dizzy throughout the first round and [illegible] before the bell. They were in Green's corner in a semi-clinch and Rossi, almost too nonchalantly, was waiting for Green to club down his right to the body, watching the fist. Instead Green hooked his left high to the head and Rossi dropped as if he had been hit with an ax.

REFEREE SAVES ROSSI

The bell rang at the toll of six and the referee could have counted a million more or less over the prostrate form. Seconds dragged the limp body to the corner and worked feverishly to revive the fighter. They were shoving smelling salts under his nose when the whistle blew for the second round and at the bell they pushed him off his stool and he staggered out to fight unaware of what was going on about him. Green advanced and tagged him with a right to the head, and, as Rossi reeled about, Referee Al Grayber grabbed him and stopped the bout. It was a great win for Dan Clark's protege.

Gornick had won all of the first four rounds of his bout with Barto, who was fighting a counter battle and appeared to be weakening in the third round, when he went partly down in his own corner, and in the fourth, when both went down together in a mix in midring.

CLASSIC FINAL ROUND

The final round was a classic that will be long remembered. It was a three minutes' nightmare for Gornick. They had hardly got out of their corners and circled half way around the ring when Barto reached out with a left and stretched Gornick flat on his back. Marty appeared to be out as much as Rossi later, but suddenly showed signs of life at the count of six, and at eight jumped to his feet and rushed in to trade punches. Barto gave him both barrels, and a right sent Gornick's head rocking back. Some more wild slugging, and then another left dropped Gornick to his knees for a count of nine, and he got up groggy and probably was saved from a knockout at this point when the referee found it necessary to consume some time wiping off his resin-dusted gloves.

Two more lefts after they resumed, and Gornick was down again, once more for nine, and he was out on his feet when the final bell clanged and the crowd tossed an ovation.

This bout brought the only split decision. Judge Phil Scello voting for Gornick, while Judge Dr. George McBeth and Referee Al Grayber voted for Barto.

Red Robinson alternated as referee and handled the main bout. Tommy Grant and Chappy Couch were the timers, and Ray Eberle did the announcing.

WOLFF, M'KEE DUEL SEEN

By TOM BIRKS

When the University of Pittsburgh golf team starts upon its 10-match schedule there is certain to be keen competition between Regis Wolff, of the Highland Country Club, and Claude McKee, of South Hills, for the honor of playing the No. 1 position.

Wolff was not eligible for varsity competition last year. Playing as an amateur in local tourneys he had a very successful year. His playing in many tourneys, especially in the Fathers and Sons events, was brilliant. On the other hand, McKee played great golf and won the Intercollegiate title. McKee is a junior at school.

Art Sekay, last year's captain, is the only man not returning to play for the Blue and Gold. Henry Decker, Ross Ferrero, Bill Van Doran and William Vornoccy will be playing for a berth on the squad.

Jack Finleyson, of Bradford, Pa., was slated to play No. 3 on the team last Spring, but was ruled ineligible. Finleyson will be out to make the team this season.

WESTERN RING STARS WIN

ST. LOUIS, April 7.—(AP.)—Far Western fighters and midlanders won the grand prizes of amateur pugilism, putting the East, South and North to rout in the finals of the forty-fifth National A. A. U. boxing championships, completed here early today.

Led by two clever, hard-hitting Negroes who carried off the heavyweight and lightweight titles, Michigan representatives made away with three titles, to lead the field. The champions follow:

Heavyweight — Stanley Evans, Highland Park, Mich., Negro.

175 pounds—Joe Louis, Detroit Negro.

160 pounds—Fred Apostoli, San Francisco.

147 pounds—Danny Farrar, Youngstown, O.

135 pounds—Norbert Meehan, San Francisco.

126 pounds—Edwin Waling, Highland Park, Mich.

118 pounds—Armando Cecilia, Springfield, Ill.

112 pounds—Tommy Barry, Springfield, Ill.

Allison Holds Lead In Tennis Duel

HOUSTON, Tex., April 7.—(AP.)—Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Davis Cup singles player last year, led George Lott, of Chicago, Davis Cup doubles veteran, two sets to one when darkness halted their semi-finals match in the River Oaks tennis tournament last evening. Allison will have two chances today to win the deciding set.

The two stars already had played 47 fiercely fought games. Lott tried hard for a second set victory after dropping the first, 5-7, but finally was nosed out, 14-12. Refusing to give up after the two heart breaking losses, the Chicagoan fought back to score a convincing 6-3 victory in the third.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 7.—(AP.)—Lefty Grove, left hander, for whom the Boston Red Sox paid the Philadelphia Athletics $135,000, worked out here yesterday with the Birmingham Barons and today will take the mound against them.

Bucky Harris, manager of the Red Sox, just before departing for Tuscaloosa, where his club played the University of Alabama, announced that Grove, whose arm has been troubling him, had asked for the assignment.

There has been some speculation as to the condition of the star pitcher's arm, but his request for the assignment was taken by Red Sox supporters as indicating the trouble was not of serious nature.

FIND LINE TO HOLE IN PUTTING

Locating the right line over which the putt is to be dispatched to the hole is important. No less an authority than Bobby Jones has stated that he has holed few putts when he could not see definitely this path. He is shown above gauging one for a long putt. The effect on the ball of the contour of the green must be figured out in advance, of course. It often is necessary to allow certain latitudes for the roll a slope might cause the ball. But gauging these possibilities should not consume a great deal of time. First judgment is often as good as the last and delay often leads to indecision as to just what course to pursue. As a result the player's mind is not fully concentrated on striking the ball accurately. His stance is tensed and part of the attention is on some undulation, imaginary or real, that is a threat to the shot's success. A good policy to follow is to pick out the line to the hole and then hit along that line without worrying about the result. But finding the correct line is important. The golfer who tries will [illegible] plenty of room for improvement [illegible] such lines. He will find [illegible] is not only saving minu[illegible] strokes.

PAIR OF SWIM MARKS FALL

COLUMBUS, O., April 7.—(AP.)—Two more world swimming records were sunk here last night, making a total of five to go under in the two days of competition in the annual National Amateur Athletic Union's indoor championships.

New York Athletic Club natators made a clean sweep of last night's program, with Leonard Spence and the crack 400-yard relay team of Fick, Howland, Leonard and Walter Spence turning in the record-breaking performances, and by so doing placing the meet on ice for the New York A. C. The eastern club now has 31 points, as compared with 17 for the University of Michigan, its nearest rival.

Leonard Spence outdistanced the field in the 220-yard breast stroke to crack his own world standard of 2:44, set in 1932, by five-tenths of a second. His time was 2:43.5.

The New York 400-yard relay team turned in the remarkable time of 3:31.6 to better its own record of 3:31.8, set in 1932.

George Dunlap Cops North, South Title

PINEHURST, N. C., April 7.—(AP.)—Battled to a standstill over half the route, George T. Dunlap, Jr., the national champion, set a hot pace on the third leg of the 36-hole final round and conquered Richard D. Chapman, Jr., of Greenwich, 4 and 3, to win his third title in the annual North and South amateur tournament here yesterday.

The champion and the contender started off with an ordinary brand of golf, in contrast to the par-breaking game both had demonstrated in the earlier rounds. Dunlap went out in 38 strokes, two over par.

George Dunlap Cops North, South Title

PINEHURST, N. C., April 7.—(AP.)—Battled to a standstill over half the route, George T. Dunlap, Jr., the national champion, set a hot pace on the third leg of the 36-hole final round and conquered Richard D. Chapman, Jr., of Greenwich, 4 and 3, to win his third title in the annual North and South amateur tournament here yesterday.

The champion and the contender started off with an ordinary brand of golf, in contrast to the par-breaking game both had demonstrated in the earlier rounds. Dunlap went out in 38 strokes, two over par.

Cue Stars Clash For Title Today

CHICAGO, April 7.—(AP.)—The contest for the international 18.2 balkline billiard championship was thrown into a deadlock again last night when Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, defeated the leader, Eric Hagenlacher, of Germany, 400 to 339, in eight innings. The victory gave Cochran a tie with his opponent for first place and necessitated a playoff for the title today.

Both players have won six games and lost two. The German's only other defeat was also at the hands of his conqueror of last night.

GIANTS DROP THREE

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 7.—(AP.)—The New York Giants have announced the release of Outfielder Phil Weintraub and Third Baseman Joe Martin to the Nashville club of the Southern Association. At the same time the Giants turned over Pitcher Clydell Castleman to Nashville.

KOUBEK, MANOS FINALISTS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

An abbreviated semi-final card makes up today's program of hostilities in the annual Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U. senior singles handball tournament in progress on the courts of the Keystone Athletic Club. Only one of the two penultimate contests will be actually played, Frank Koubek, youthful Keystone star, being slated to encounter the perennial premier, Theos Manos, likewise of the K. A. C., this afternoon. Mike Hrycko, Downtown Y. M. C. A. luminary, is unable to appear this afternoon and has defaulted the other tussle to Dave Olbum, husky Y. M. H. A. contender, who attained the semi-finals a year ago.

Young Koubek, brother of chairman Dick Koubek, registered a brilliant quarter-final victory over Carl Debberthine, Downtown Y hope, 21-15, 21-19, yesterday, while Olbum was scoring an astoundingly impressive win at expense of Parker Smith, favored Keystoner, 21-3, 21-8. Covering the court remarkablely well and driving hard, Koubek pulled ahead of a seemingly fatigued Debberthine after the 8-8 stage had been reached in the initial game. From that point on, the Keystoner maintained a slender, but sufficient, advantage to the end of the engagement, neat front wall drops helping him from time to time. Debberthine registered numerous telling shots, but on the whole seemed unable to get organized.

Olbum's quick triumph over Smith saw the survivor distinctly on and the loser somewhat off. Olbum tallied often through the medium of his slow service, particularly when he directed the pellet to the left. Smith's returns of this delivery were frequently setups and Dave hesitated not at all in killing them into the corners. When not actually serving, Olbum relied mainly on severity that kept his rival pretty generally on the gallop. Manos and Hrycko reached the semi-finals Thursday. The final is slated for tomorrow afternoon.

Entries for the doubles event will be accepted by Chairman Koubek until tonight. He may be reached in care of the Keystone A. C. Most of the outstanding combinations of the district are already aligned for hostilities, which get under way on Monday.

Squash Racquets Day was being observed at the P. A. A. this afternoon and evening, with large coterie of Winged Head racqueteers listed for special exhibition and intra-club tournament tilts. A feature of the competitive schedule is long-discussed joust between the Red and Gray class A and class B squads, captors of titular honors in their respective divisions of the P. S. R. A. Intra-Club League race. A dinner will follow the more strenuous portion of the affair. Coach Harold Mortlock, Dr. Dave O'Loughlin, and Karl Wolfe are handling the party.

STOCKS MEET BAR IN RALLY ATTEMPT

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP.)—Stocks tried to rally in the early trading today, but general response was lacking. A slightly irregular drift developed at the start of the last hour. Alcohols quieted after an initial buying flurry. Leading industrials and rails were comparatively narrow.

American Telephone lost a point, and lesser recessions were shown by Loew's, General Electric, Southern Pacific, United Aircraft and United States Steel common. Steadiness predominated in General Motors, American Car and Foundry, Santa Fe and Montgomery Ward. United States Smelting and United States Steel preferred gained major fractions each.

At the same time, while the industrial picture was not altogether clear, trade analysts interpreted the March figures on steel production as strong evidence of the breadth and extent of the recovery. The output during the month amounted to 2,797,194 gross tons of ingots and the daily rate of 103,600 tons was the largest for any month since August last year.

While comparisons with the 1933 month are somewhat misleading, owing to the fact that trade and industry were then virtually at a standstill, steel production in the past month was more than three times the gross output, daily rate and percentage of capacity employed in the same period last year.

That bearish sentiment regarding stocks is not being backed up too strongly with short sales was shown by the New York Stock Exchange report which disclosed that, on March 28, the short interest amounted to 929,495 shares compared with 970,494 shares on February 28. The high mark for last year was 1,894,632 shares on February 14.

Foreign exchanges were quiet at the opening of trading. Sterling was up ½ cent at $5.17 and French francs were unchanged at 6.60 cents.

GRAINS SCORE BRISK RALLY

CHICAGO, April 7. — Grain prices developed strength early today following downward tendencies at the start. Buying was stimulated as a result of prospective silver legislation and because of orders at least temporarily holding up rye imports.

Opening unchanged to ¼ lower, May 86¼@86⅜, wheat soon scored all around advances. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ off and subsequently climbed.

Nation's Bank Clearings

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP.)—The advance in bank clearings, which started the early part of March, has been continued into April. The total this week for all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun and Bradstreet, Inc., was $4,823,052,000, this amount being 12.6 per cent larger than that for the same week of last year. At New York City, clearings were $3,358,235,000, a gain of 8.8 per cent, while the total for all centers outside of New York was $1,464,817,000, being 22.1 per cent higher.

The percentage of increase over a year ago at a number of important cities again was well up with the high figures shown for the week immediately preceding, although the partial stagnation prevailing at this time last year already had worn off to some extent. Clearings for the current week cover the heavier monthly and quarterly settlements due at this time, and this, in part, accounts for the larger total. The amount shown for this week exceeds that of the preceding week by $440,541,000; a year ago, when operations were greatly restricted, there was an increase for the same two weeks of $561,105,000.

Figures for leading centers, showing increases as compared with those of last year, are printed herewith, also daily bank clearings for the year to date:

STEEL ORDERS UP AS PRICE ADVANCES

By B. E. V. LUTY

Price advances are being made on the majority of steel products, effective next week as to new transactions, but practically effective chiefly on deliveries after June 30 as customers are being given protection to that date.

With a few exceptions, the volume of buying has been slipping somewhat since the early days of March, but there has been a little increase in the last week and the price advances are expected to cause a marked increase.

Production of steel ingots as officially forecast was highest for the week ended March 10, at 47.7 per cent of capacity, successive weekly figures being 46.2, 46.8, 45.7 and 43.3 per cent, this week being 4.4 points below the high but above any week from late August to the latter part of February.

The downturn in demand was commonly ascribed to fears engendered generally by introduction of the Wagner labor disputes bill on March 1, while by the same token the recent upturn is assumed to be due to the growing aspect that the bill will be greatly modified or dropped entirely.

Price advances to become effective April 10 are: Blooms, billets and slabs, $3 a ton to $29; sheet bars, $4 a ton to $30; skelp, $2 a net ton to $1.70; wire rods, $2 to $38; plain wire and fence, $3 a net ton; nails, staples and barb wire, $5. Advances to become effective April 15 or thereabouts are $3 a net ton on the heavy rolled products to $1.90 for bars and $1.85 for plates and shapes; $5 a net ton on heavy sheets and $8 on light sheets, those with 20 or 24 gauge base, $5 on hot rolled strips and $8 on cold rolled strips to $2.00 and $2.80 respectfully.

JUNE RUSH POSSIBLE

Tin plate was advanced as of December 1 with an understanding that the price would hold through the canning season, while rails are a matter of negotiation with the railroad co-ordinator. Pipe is in doubt, and this summary covers the whole category of important steel products.

In the majority of products there were losses up to April 1 and then came the general 10 per cent wage advance, increasing the disparity between costs and selling prices. The majority of products can be stocked and it is expected buyers will take advantage of the opportunity, anticipating July and probably some August requirements. Thus the mills will be making about four months of steel in three months, at the increased cost and the old prices, except for two points, that there will be a little business at the higher prices, with occasional buyers not covered, and that costs will be reduced somewhat by heavier operation. The offset to the latter influence is that with light operations in July and August costs would go up again.

The average of steel production in the quarter should well exceed 50 per cent of capacity, from the present outlook, but what the peak rate will be cannot be conjectured because it is not clear that the stocking-up process can be spread out. Mills state that the code requires "equal monthly deliveries," but that could not be applied to April when the contracts are made so late and it may be difficult to divide the deliveries equally between May and June, so that a June rush is a possibility.

MORE RAIL ORDERS

Automobile production in March is estimated at about 325,000 units, which would represent an amount of steel equal to about 10 per cent of total steel making capacity. April is expected to run materially heavier.

Additional rail orders are being placed, April 15 being set as the last date under the special price agreement, and the total tonnage in the movement may be around three-fourths of the 845,000 tons in the original Eastman program, whereas a couple months ago there was doubt whether the total would run one-half. Actual production so far has been relatively light. Deliveries are required to be completed by August 31. Car and locomotive material is coming out more freely and there is a fair volume of production.

In various relatively minor lines representing current consumption of household articles there is a very fair volume of activity, the great laggard being the capital goods industries.

Pig iron is expected to advance by a uniform dollar a ton in all districts. The first advance was filed on Thursday.

On Monday, Connellsville coke was advanced 35 cents a ton, all grades, in connection with the wage advance at coal mines and coke ovens.

There has been a heavy buying movement in scrap in various districts, with about 20,000 tons of heavy melting taken in the Pittsburgh district at $14.25 and about 5,000 tons of select material, chiefly railroad, at $14.75.

Montgomery Ward Shows Good Profit

CHICAGO, April 7.—Sewell Avery, president of Montgomery Ward Company, stated the company has made a profit of about $1,000,000 for the first two months of the present fiscal year. The company has made a profit of approximately a million dollars for February and March, which compares with a loss of $1,900,000 for the same months last year, he said. This was the first profit realized for those two months since 1929.

Western Railroads Extend Cut Fares

CHICAGO, April 7.—Western railroads have decided to continue for another four months period, or to September 30, 1934 the reduced basic rates of passenger fare inaugerated last December for an experimental period of six months.

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Henry Ford, true to himself, again refuses to be regimented.

Having conducted a one-man revolt against the NRA, he is now refusing to go along with his competitors in translating higher wages into higher prices for his automobiles.

Mr. Rukeyser

Ford stated his position as follows:

"Higher wages are not an additional cost under proper management. Better-paid workmen are more willing and more efficient. Better material is not necessarily more expense; on the contrary, it is always more economical."

FIGHTS INDUSTRY

The sage of Dearborn recognizes that high wages constitute an incentive to eliminate economic waste in the use of manpower. Ford himself pioneered in demonstrating the economics of high wages. It is of course quite obvious that, if the benefits of higher wages are immediately dissipated in a corresponding higher cost of living, there has been no real increase in purchasing power.

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

When they were parting and he kissed her, she murmured happily: "I love going out with you, Gregg."

"I love coming home with you, Pippin. Saying good night, like this—"

He kissed her again.

She thought: "It's vacation. We can trifle along—gay little dalliance. Everyone is entitled to this. Even Helena said you should gather murmurs to echo in your heart down the quiet monogamous years."

She hung up the blue chiffon loiteringly setting the ruffles straight. She recalled the flush in Gregg's eyes and felt a strange sense of power. She refused to formulate her thoughts but far back in her mind something said with a little stab of excitement: "I could make him love me. I can make men love me!"

She sat on her bed, wrapping her arms about her knees and letting her thoughts wander deliciously. Gregg was a delightful companion. He was a good sport. You could have fun running about the world with Gregg.

Thinks of Bill

She thought of Bill and wondered if he planned to leave the navy; if he would perhaps go in for perilous, beautiful adventures in aviation. She had always wanted to fly. She saw herself climbing into a plane, Bill looking down at her adoringly.

But of Kevin she didn't speculate. She hadn't looked at his picture since Vivian's death. She no longer thought of him with adoration.

He had awakened her young, dreaming heart. With a deep, secret awareness, she knew she was capable of love such as Vivian felt. But it is mad for a girl to love like that. Black, devouring hunger. It destroys you. She didn't think of Kevin.

One day she was at Kathleen's. They looked at snapshots Kevin sent to his mother. Pippin picked out instantly a girl who stood at Kevin's side. They were pictures taken on one of those week-end trips down the river.

She asked causally: "Who is she?"

Kathleen answered: "That's Hildegarde Kamla. I guess it's quite a case. She seems to appear in every picture. Don't you love her possessive air?"

There was nothing possessive about Hildegarde's air. She was just girl, smiling, evidently pleased with the world in general and Kevin in particular. But Pippin found herself in a smoking tumult:

"I thought he was working so terribly hard and writing papers with one of those German doctors! How does he have time to be so gay?"

Kathleen raised her eyebrows and her shoulders in the way they had whenever they talked of something they considered blase.

Old German Custom

"Well, after all, he has some leisure. It seems to be a good old German custom to share it with a sweet fraulein."

Pippin walked home rapidly. After all, what was it to her if Kevin Malone made a pretty German girl happy?

She believed in freedom. Men were free; girls, too, should be free . . .

Then why all this excitement because Kevin was enjoying his week-ends on the banks of a woodland stream not far from the city of Leipsig?

She paused — letting her glance flash across the dark, encircling rampart of the city's hills. Trees are lovely against a blue summer sky. She was remembering another day when she stood here listening to a song in her heart — the day Kevin kissed her and all the world was touched with beauty!

She thought cynically, feeling herself sharply analytical: "Adolescent hang-over. I thought of him as Galahad, head and shoulders above all other men. Would I want that type today?"

She wondered if she really cared whom Kevin loved. Of course not—absurd! Yet all evening and for many days a little gnawing ache went through her thoughts.

She had none of these pangs with Gregg. . . . Pure delight. He got his job on the lake. They worked on the play. They took hikes in the evening. They went shooting in the little chug boat across the enchanted moonlit waters, telling each other how bright they were and how Life must throw her sparkling jewels at their feet. They could wear the diadem so well!

Gregg sold a long mystery serial. He earned $300.

"The way seems clear now, Pipin.'

"For what?"

Glory of Writing

"For glory! That's the beauty of writing as a career. All of life is material. The more fun you have—the more color you grab; the more scenes and emotions and conflicts you cram into your living, the richer is your output. In any other career you have to sacrifice living for working.

"Pippin, I'm going to miss you fiercely. I've looked at so many romantic moons with you. I feel a part of me gone when you're not along."

"I don't want to think of you far away, Gregg. You're such a good chum."

"I know a couple who scribbled their way all through Mexico. Climbed the almost impossible cliffs; saw the pyramids of Yucatan, the high point in the achievement of their past; saw the murals of Diego Rivera, the high point in the creative art of the Mexicans today. History marching in living pictures! They hadn't a cent except what they earned as they went. Think of the riches now in their memories."

"Doesn't it sound fascinating!"

"It can be done. Life goes as we plan it or gets muddled by the infringement of other lives. It's up to us. But we've got to be sure of the thing we want. We have to fix an image in our minds and focus on it and allow nothing—NOTHING to destroy that image."

"No. I think the pattern is set. We only change a thread or two."

"Pippin—we've been talking like this for two years. What will we be doing two years hence?"

From the comfort of his shoulder, she answered dreamily: "Perhaps none of the sweet, inspiring things we plan."

Gregg's Course Set

"I will. Nothing is going to interfere. I've got my course set."

"Do you feel that strong against Fate, Gregg? I think of Vivian and how intently she wanted the big, blazing experiences. Life trampled her down. It's almost futile to plan. It's all written in the nucleus from which we grew—perhaps years, centuries before we were born. I feel so defenseless."

His arm tightened about her. She drew close, suddenly lonely and sad.

"Why do we worry about our future, Gregg? It's not important to achieve. 'God does not need either man's work or His own gifts. His state is kingly,' as John Milton wrote."

"Whether God needs our work or not, Pippin, we need it! We're important to ourselves. A couple of centuries ago, Immanuel Kant said it all. We'll never know whence we came nor where we end. But we've got to believe that the space between which is our mortal life, is of supreme importance . . .

As for me, I won't put by the lute. I want my singing minute!"

They sat a long while silent with their boat moored and the dark overhanging crags echoing with the voiceless song of the night.

The black peaks of the mountains cut into a still blue sky. The restless stars swept together in great, streaming banners.

"It's so still," Pippin whispered, "yet the stars are troubled. They seem scurrying about with wild, enormous activity. I lie awake at night and watch them shooting to their beautiful, swift destruction."

Gregg caught her up with a sudden, unexpected: "I love you!"

Now Go On

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Milia or whiteheads disfigure many an otherwise lovely skin. Pores close, sebaceous substance piles up. There is only one defense against it, to slit the skin with a sterilized needle, pick out the bead with the needle point — pressure won't accomplish anything at all. This trouble is caused by sluggish functioning of the skin combined with lazy circulation. Use ice freely. Massage every night with a heavy cream.

A ruddy, florid complexion won't give way to any external application. The cause is usually found in a heavy diet, not enough fluids, not enough green vegetables, milk and fruit juices. Strange though it may seem, a bit of rouge is an improvement. Powder must match, a lighter shade is too apparent.

Passing the fingertips over a skin surface that is blotched with pimples is a bad practice. It spreads infection. If pustules are opened and the pus pressed out, the poisonous substance must be picked up quickly with a cleansing tissue so it will not come in contact with the skin. Before opening these unsightly blemishes, bathe the face with a rich suds, friction it in with the finger ends. Soap is a mild antiseptic valuable in the treatment of eruptions. Rinse the lather away with warm water. Half an hour later dip a cloth in pure alcohol, go over the epidermis lightly. Alcohol clears the pores of blackheads.

IN SOUTH CAROLINA'S LEGISLATURE AFTER CIVIL WAR

After an Old Cut.

In March, 1867, Congress, hostile to the South, passed the Reconstruction Act, placing the 10 Southern states under five Union generals. These displaced the governments established after the close of the Civil War by President Johnson, who tried to follow Lincoln's reconciliatory policy.

In the execution of the "Reconstruction," the Negroes were favored, whites intimidated (frequently disfranchised) in the South in rather punitive fashion. South Carolina's Legislature, for instance, at one time comprised 98 Negroes and 57 white members, only 22 of them literate.

One reaction of the South was the spread of the secret order, the Ku Klux Klan, designed to frighten Negroes into social and political obscurity. Hatred and violence were generated on both sides. (United States History)

ADRENAL (SUPRARENAL) GLANDS

These, two small bodies above the kidneys, divide into outer, firmer cortex, central, soft medulla.

The medulla secrets adrenin, or adrenalin, which stimulates contraction of heart, blood vessels (its use makes surgery almost bloodless), releases glycogen from liver (counteracts insulin), distends air sacks in lungs (used in treatment of asthma), accelerates breathing, neutralizes acid in blood produced in muscles, stimulates production of Nissl bodies in brain cells in presence of oxygen (hence need of fresh air during study). Adrenalin can be synthetized in laboratory.

Function of the adrenal cortex is probably regulation of metabolism of lipoides (fats not decomposed by alkalies) and is essential to life.

Removal of adrenals causes disappearance of Nissl bodies, and death in about 15 hours. Diseased adrenals result in anemia, feeble heart action, pigmentation (bronzing, melasma) of the skin, the fatal Addison's disease (right). (Gen. Science)

COMING OF ARTHUR—LANCELOT AND GUINEVERE

The "Coming of Arthur" (publ. 1869) is the first of the twelve "Idylles of the King" by Alfred Tennyson (1809-1892).

Young King Arthur, about to conquer rebel barons, is attracted to Guinevere, daughter of King Leodegran. He has difficulty obtaining parental consent to the marriage owing to the mystery surrounding his birth, but finally it is given. Lancelot fetches Guinevere, whom Arthur marries. Arthur's aim: "Have power on this dark land, to lighten it. And power on this dead world to make it live."

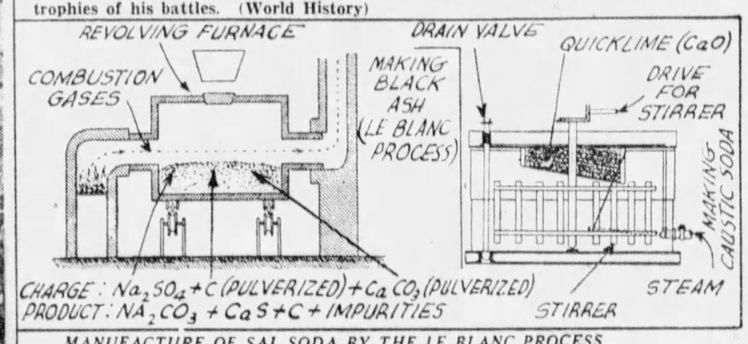
END OF NAPOLEON'S REIGN—BATTLE OF WATERLOO ON THE "BELLEROPHONE"

The European powers, their armies united under command of British Gen. Wellington and Prussian Gen. Bluecher, defeated Napoleon at Waterloo (June 18, 1815). He was forced to abdicate again, ending his "Hundred Days Reign," and surrendered to the British. He was carried on the "Bellerophone" to England. Soon Napoleon was transported to St. Helena Island in the Atlantic, where he lived as prisoner until 1821, seeing his military achievements undone. His body now rests in the French national shrine (Palais des Invalides), Paris, among torn flags, trophies of his battles. (World History)



MANUFACTURE OF SAL SODA BY THE LE BLANC PROCESS

Sal soda, sodium carbonate (Na_2CO_3; crystallized; washing soda) raw material for many industries (chart below) is found in few natural deposits. Progress of civilization was greatly retarded for want of cheap source.

The French Le Blanc, won a prize of the French Academy for his process shortly before outbreak of the Revolution. The more economical Solway process (1863) made the Le Blanc process obsolete.

Courtesy of The MacMillan Co. (Partington: Inorganic Chemistry)

In the Le Blanc process, sulphuric acid is heated with sodium chloride, yielding sodium sulphate (salt cake) and hydrochloric acid as by-product: $2\,NaCl + H_2SO_4 = Na_2SO_4 + 2HCl$.

Then salt cake is heated with coal slack and limestone in a revolving furnace (above left) and black-ash obtained, a mixture of sodium carbonate, calcium sulphide, carbon and impurities: $Na_2SO_4 + 2\,C = Na_2S + 2CO_2$ and $Na_2S + CaCO_3 = Na_2CO_3 + CaS$.

Soda was leached, won by evaporation from black ash, but as Solvay process produces soda cheaper, black-ash is converted into caustic soda by lixiviating with water and running the liquor into a causticizer (above right.) This holds CaO in an iron cage, dipping into the liquor. The stirrer is started and steam is blown in. Reaction: $Na_2CO_3 + Ca(OH)_2 = CaCO_3 + 2NaOH$ (caustic soda). (Chem.)

Remember the Professors?

Some of the theorists are feeling pretty good now. All the others are still convalescent.

You know there was a time about a year ago when anybody with a theory was teacher's pet.

If you could write a thesis on economics everybody said, "That's wonderful. What's it about?"

The more formulas you worked in the better it was. That's the mechanism of self-defense. The lady who doesn't understand a thing always looks more intelligent than the man who does.

So when Prof. Reddink wrote, "By manipulating the science of the gold control we can manage the mercantile tangent so that the price level of the industrial graph will coincide with the yardstick of the monetary recovery," he struck the nail right on the big toe.

We all fell flat on our absorbent faces. Prof. Reddink was invited to speak at all the political meetings. He was on his way to fame. If he could only have played a banjo he would have sure got a commercial sponsor.

But, just at that time, who bobs up but Prof. Backtrax, who not only took exception to Prof. Reddink's color scheme in bookkeeping, but also had a pill for all ills.

Prof. Backtrax remarked in a casual scream, "Economic reactions are as fallacious as gold itself. Why gild putty? What we must do is to fix public flexes at such a high standard that every man in the world will owe every other man in the world the same amount of money."

By that time you could have knocked us over with the breeze from a spinning top.

We got the two experts into a debate at town hall. That didn't turn out so well. Both lads had plenty of questions with them. But could only show their trunk checks for the answers.

Finally, both professors went down to Washington to straighten out everything. That's the last we have heard of them in a year. But we have no doubt that they are adding to the world's sum total of knowledge by counting the number of steps up Washington Monument.

That's too bad. But the boys have learned something we discovered years ago. The road to fame is paved with trap doors.

THE GREAT ILLUSION

(The following editorial appears in the Saturday Evening Post of April 7, 1934, and is reprinted herewith by special permission of the editor. Copyright, 1934, by the Curtis Publishing Company.)

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST is neither a Republican nor a Democratic organ. It does not condone the abuses of power and trust of the Republican Party while it was in office, and it cannot indorse those policies and experiments of the New Deal that look to the left.

In our opinion, this is a time when the press and the public must examine thoroughly and feel free to criticize every proposal advanced by the administration. We can imagine no greater disservice to the country than the hush-hush policy advocated by so many adherents of the New Deal. It is better to be careful now than sorry later. It is safer to put over one sound plan than a dozen doubtful experiments. Recovery is important, but the fundamental issue today is THE PRESERVATION OF DEMOCRACY AND OUR TRADITIONAL AMERICAN LIBERTIES along with recovery.

It is hard to believe that when the Republicans were in office they were 100 per cent crooked. It is equally hard to believe that the Democrats are 100 per cent pure, now that they have taken over the government, for there is more than a suspicion that there are seekers after special privileges in their ranks of the same stripe as those who were inside the breastworks or were camp followers of the Republican Party. In appraising both parties, it is well to remember that under Republican rule the promises and covenants of the government were kept. On the other hand, the recent devaluation and financial programs that involved the repudiation of our solemn covenants are a blot on the 'scutcheon of the Democratic Party which no emergency soft soap will wash out. Furthermore, we are now being told that some of these "EMERGENCY" measures, which were cheerfully accepted by the public for the duration of the emergency, ARE TO BE MADE PERMANENT.

"Strong and Intelligent Opposition Party Must Take the Field"

THE question before the American people—a question that is inextricably interwoven with the policies and experiments of the moment—is this; Do we want a democratic or a collectivist system?

Do we want freedom as individuals to live our lives under the Constitution and free courts; do we want individual opportunity and scope to work out our private and business lives within sane and law-abiding limits or do we want to be regimented—told what we can do, how much we can do and when we can do it; do we want a free press, a free radio and free speech, or someone to tell us WHAT WE CAN THINK AND WHAT WE CAN SAY?

Secretary Wallace, in denying that we are tainted with either Fascism or Communism, says that we are living IN A STATE OF ILLUSION.

We agree, but we would make it plural. Among many others, our illusions are that nature is not the dominant partner in all farm operations, and that theories which clash with realities are workable.

If we do not want to swing far over to the left, a strong and intelligent opposition party must take the field.

As it is today, both the Republican and Democratic parties embrace conservatives, liberals, socialists and opportunists.

The so-called Progressives have for years been playing both ends against the middle and are today, in everything except the label which they cling to for purely political reasons, frankly Democrats.

The Republican Party has lacked the courage to make them move over into the New Deal bed and lie there. But unless the Republican Party cleans house, adopts a liberal platform, while holding fast to American constitutional ideals and principles, we can see small chance for it.

Today there is no clear line of cleavage in the membership of the two parties.

The Democratic Party has cut loose from its traditions and stands for a strongly centralized, bureaucratic government that is getting a grip on every kind of private business and putting into effect many extremely radical measures that look towards ultimate collectivism.

Some of those who loosely call themselves Republicans belong in the Democratic Party.

An even larger number of those labeled Democrats, who still hold to traditional American ideals and institutions, belong in a reformed and reconstructed Republican Party.

"Plenty of Honest and Patriotic Businessmen In the Country"

MEANWHILE the country moves farther and farther towards the left, for the implication if not the intention of proposal after proposal that is put forth by the party in power takes us closer and closer to collectivism, makes it harder and harder to retreat to Americanism, and predicates, logically and inexorably, something very close to the Russian system.

Right now there is a "what the hell!" attitude in the air. A large part of the public is saying, "We can't be any worse off than we were, so we'll take a chance on this one." That is the new philosophy that goes with the New Deal.

But we could be a good deal worse off than we were and are.

EVERY FAILURE OF AN ILL-CONCEIVED AND HASTILY TRIED MEASURE IS A STEP BACKWARD IN THE HEALING PROCESS THAT NATURAL CAUSES HAVE BEEN BRINGING ABOUT BOTH HERE AND ABROAD.

We believe that there is enough of the old spirit among the more fortunate in America to sacrifice for the unfortunate and to submit to the last limit of taxation to help through the depression, so long as the money is usefully employed, and expended without politics, graft and waste, and so long as their traditional and constitutional liberties are maintained.

That would be a hard pull temporarily, but it would have a sound finish.

Some of the plans that have no final left-wing connotation and that are being hastily thrown into the New Deal hopper contain the elements of success. With careful planning and wise administration over a term of months and years, they would unquestionably prove helpful.

But with the administration springing a new panacea every morning on a bewildered public and demanding the passing without delay of a pre-prepared bill by a yes-sir Congress, there is small chance for even a good idea to work out.

In the case of ALMOST EVERY MAJOR PLAN that has been advanced, it has been found that certain provisions are in opposition to other provisions and that in practical operation they tend TO CANCEL ONE ANOTHER and to NEGATIVE the good features of the measure.

We can think of no plan or measure that has been put out by the administration that does not call for long and careful consideration by business experts familiar with the strains and stresses that even the best-conceived plan must meet in practical operation. For, despite the contrary idea that is being advanced in many quarters, there are plenty of honest and patriotic businessmen in the country.

But most of the legislation that is being proposed bears the imprint of the brain trust—so-called intellectuals who have theories about what makes the wheels go around and what ought to make them go around, but who have NEVER MADE A WHEEL TURN OVER.

"Business Rightly Awaits Events With Apprehension"

CWA is a good example of this. Carefully planned and slowly put into effect with able administrators, with politics and politicians ruthlessly eliminated, with nothing but useful and necessary work undertaken, and with wages paid on a scale that would not disorganize local business and tempt labor already employed into its ranks, it would have proved a useful stop-gap.

NRA has many admirable features, but from the first it has been in danger of falling into the hands of extremists and has undoubtedly worked hardships that were probably unforeseen when it was put out in its half-baked condition.

Because it has not come up to expectations, new ideas and new plans are being considered that will further endanger its success. Instead of labor and capital working together, there is a drift toward impossible conditions for capital.

We have no sympathy with hard-boiled employers, and we have none with just-as-hard-boiled labor leaders. We are unalterably opposed to sweated labor and we believe in the payment by every industry of the highest wages that it can stand, with due consideration of the rights of all the interests involved. BUT WE CAN SEE NO REAL GAIN IN MAKING IT IMPOSSIBLE FOR INDUSTRY TO MAKE PROFITS AND TO PAY DIVIDENDS.

Many concerns are paying good wages, others in the same industry not so good.

If we were to treat them all alike, with a blanket 10 per cent increase in wages and a 10 per cent or more decrease in hours, a large number of businesses that are already in the red and that have been living on hope and steadily decreasing reserves, would go to the wall and many others would have to discontinue the payment of dividends.

In short, anything of the sort would be a long step towards abolishing the profit motive, SO ARDENTLY ADVOCATED IN SOME QUARTERS.

Though NRA has disclaimed any intention of enforcing blanket decreases and increases, business rightly awaits the event with apprehension. A wise doctor will not advise a patient who is slowly recovering from a long illness and beginning to sit up, to take dumbbell exercises before breakfast.

"Farmer In For a Rude Awakening From His Illusions"

IF CONDITIONS are made impossible for the employer, and government finally has to take over, as many of our left-wingers hope, labor will find that, in the end, it has the hardest taskmaster and the lowest scale of living in its history.

The proof is in many countries today. In giving a forty-hour week to labor and the increases in pay already made, always excepting the so-called chiselers, industry has gone about as far is it can safely go under present conditions.

If the present drift continues, the farmer, too, is in for a rude awakening from his illusions.

Already it is apparent that AAA is not working out on schedule, and ambitious plans to move a large population off marginal lands are in the making and cotton planters are in for real regimentation.

It is, of course, only a step from this to telling producers of wheat, cattle, hogs, dairy and other farm products what and how much they can raise, where they can live and whether they can farm at all.

Finally, such a program would lead to the DISPOSSESSION of the "kulaks"—that is, the owners of good farms on which they can make a profit above their living expenses—and THE COLLECTIVIZATION OF THEIR LAND BY THE GOVERNMENT.

Many of those who are drifting with the tide will say that anything of this sort is impossible, but they do not know some of their professors.

MUCH OF IT IS ALREADY UNDER WAY OR PLANNED, and the rest is a perfectly logical conclusion from the premises.

During the past year we have taken first steps towards this goal that are longer than those that remain to be taken. The country is headed to the left and is already deep in left territory.

Hand in hand with our experiments, a series of investigations and exposures have been taking place, and though they have been aimed almost solely at Republicans in the previous administration, we are for them. Expose the offenders and turn them out if they deserve it.

Later, perhaps, Congress may get around to an investigation of some of the Democrats. That there are offenders in that party, too, is possible—in fact, the President himself has turned up several leads.

HOWEVER, IT WAS NOT NECESSARY TO DISORGANIZE THE AIR-MAIL SERVICE IN ORDER TO PUNISH INDIVIDUALS WHO MAY HAVE BEEN GUILTY OF IMPROPER PRACTICES.

There are orderly and legal ways to punish the guilty without depriving the innocent of their livelihood and hamstringing the finest commercial air-service in the world.

"Measures Drawn by Men Untainted With Experience"

NO OTHER publication in the United States has more consistently opposed the indiscriminate sale of foreign bonds in the United States and preached as strongly, year in and year out, against the evils of speculation than has the Saturday Evening Post.

We have refused to take financial advertising, even from houses that we knew were reputable and honest in their dealings, because it was impossible for us thoroughly to investigate securities and to guarantee our readers against loss in those stocks and bonds that bankers and brokers sought to advertise in our columns.

But we do not believe that it is necessary to hamstring or kill our exchanges—for they perform many useful and necessary functions and services—in order to stop the manipulation of securities and the rooking of the investing public.

There is a great difference between cleaning up and killing, between getting the crooks and crippling the bankers and brokers who perform services that are vital to the business of the nation.

When one looks over all these measures, when one considers their kill-to-cure provisions, one can only conclude that they have been planned and drawn by men untainted with any practical experience. There is something almost sophomoric about the ideas and plans of these smart, shallow young men who are so cocksure and so determined to make us all over in five or ten minutes.

It is impossible to escape the conclusion that today we are having GOVERNMENT BY AMATEURS—college boys, irrespective of their age—who, having drunk deep, perhaps, of the Pierian spring, have recently taken some hearty swigs of Russian vodka. We cannot solve our problems with a discredited European ideology and a Marxian philosophy.

The great illusion of the moment is that we can gain any worthwhile happiness or prosperity BY THE SACRIFICE OF OUR HARDLY WON LIBERTIES.

Air Scandals Due to Politics

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Politics is a deleterious profession like some poisonous handicrafts.—Emerson.

WHEN this Congress or the next, through an impartial and fearless investigating committee, finally gets to the bottom of the wreck of the federal air mail, the crippling of American air transport and the shocking slaughter of so many of the best trained military pilots in the world, the bottom of this scandal will, it is to be feared, show up green with the scum of politics.

The cabinet officer who cancelled all domestic air mail contracts without due process of law is still the chairman of the National Committee of the party in power and of the Senate committee of the party in power in his own state.

In this triple capacity he holds the power of life and death politically over nearly all of the Senators and Representatives of his party who come up for renomination and re-election this year.

In this triple capacity he holds the same power over those Roosevelt Republicans in both houses who come up for renomination and re-election this year.

The first assistant of this cabinet officer is also a member of the National Committee from his own state.

* * *

Politics Marks Every Step of Trail

THE United States Senator who has been the most aggressive enemy of the federal air mail and of federal aid for American air transport, and at whose instigation these contracts were cancelled, is the member from his own state on the National Committee of his party. He is also a candidate for renomination and re-election.

Another cabinet officer who advised the cancellation of the contracts is a former vice chairman and former chairman of the National Committee of the party in power and is widely known as "an old political hand."

Furthermore, the chairman of the National Committee who cancelled these contracts has recently appointed as his assistant in immediate charge of what is left of the air mail the former employe of another member of the National Committee.

And so it goes—every step of the trail down which the wreckers of the federal air mail have dragged the administration is marked with the footprints of politicians.

Until Congress gets to the bottom of this calamity, the people will continue to be perplexed concerning its causes.

They do not yet know what sinister political or other influences dictated the disruption of the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce.

* * *

Payroll Changes Not Explained

THEY cannot explain why the non-political and highly efficient personnel of this federal agency, charged with the regulation and development of commercial aviation, should have been replaced with kinsmen and political dependents of a powerful group of Democratic senators.

They have not yet been told why so many former employes of unsuccessful applicants for air mail contracts have been placed on the federal payroll in recent months.

They are beginning to distrust the fairness of the various proposals made at both ends of Pennsylvania avenue for the return of the air mail to private operations.

They are surprised at the abysmal ignorance concerning his own department, which the chairman of the National Committee in power showed as a recent witness before a Senate investigating committee.

This witness admitted that he did not write the letter, although he signed it, which canceled the air mail contracts.

When asked the question whether he was familiar with the law passed by the last Congress stipulating the method by which air mail contracts could be canceled after due notice and a hearing, he said this provision of the law had never been specifically called to his attention.

When Congress gave the Postmaster General authority to contract for the carrying of the air mail, it did not expect that he would attempt, at the same time, to run the national committee and the state committee of his own party.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 7.—One of those desperately glossy young men called today. He was a monotone of gray, relieved only by a flouncy dewlap of deep purple cravat, and exuding rare nectars of Cathay. He wanted to interest me in something or other. An annuity, I think.

But he made me feel so much like last week's bag of soiled laundry I could not concentrate. All I could think of was a way to jockey him into a confession as to where he acquired such surprising habilliments. But I never did and fell to wondering why.

Certainly I might have asked: "Where in the world did you get that smart turnout?" It would doubtless have flattered him, but I have blundered through life with some accusative fixation that to inquire about the simple trollopings things that fascinate brands one as nibby.

Although my nibbishness is concerned only with the trivial and irrelevant. My inhibition came to a dead stop years ago. I sat a seat removed from the husband of a stage star being embraced with much ardor on the stage. Leaning toward him I inquired: "Do you mind?" He never spoke to me again.

Such repression is probably why I never asked Otto Kahn if he uses mustache wax; Al Smith if he really likes a brown derby; Clifton Webb what he really says nightly to Marilyn Miller when they are supposed to be talking off to one side while others occupy the spot; Amos and Andy if their close association doesn't get on their nerves; Elizabeth Arden if she really enjoys a facial; Lindbergh if he prayed crossing the Atlantic; Lily Pons if she liked a touch of garlic in her salad; Sinclair Lewis if he subscribes to a press clipping bureau and Charles Evans Hughes if he ever talked baby talk.

A few days ago, at a dinner, the host, next to Will Hogg, was the frankest person I've ever known. With coffee, cigars and cigarets were passed. A gentleman on my right waved them away and walked to a humidor on the mantle. As he was lifting the lid, the host cried: "Don't take one of those cigars. They are very special." He made no apologies, but went on talking. Possibly rude, but I'd almost swap my hope of heaven for such magnificent forthrightness.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

A TREASURE has been added to the rare book room of the Library of Congress, a trove of vanishing Americana — a collection of cheaply-printed and yellow-covered pamphlets, which are the original first editions of none other than Ed Wheeler's classic, entitled "Deadwood Dick, the Prince of the Road," or "The Black Rider of the Black Hills."

Yes, the Dime Novel, once proscribed and so maligned in Grandpa's day and in Father's time, has come into high estate. Take the fine collection in the New York Public Library. The experts there got a lot of amusement while cataloguing it, but one of them had this to say:

"The dime novel is saturated with the pioneer spirit of America. It portrays the struggles, exploits, trials, dangers, feats of hardships and daily lives of the American pioneers from the days of the Puritans to the death of Custer. And it breathes the spirit which for two and a half centuries shaped the conquest and development of the continent north of the Rio Grande. It is literature intensely nationalistic and patriotic, in character designed to stimulate adventure, self-reliance and achievement; to exalt the feats of the pioneer women and men who settled the country."

Five Million Sold in Five Years

ONE Erastus Beadle, a New York printer, was the perpetrator—or should we say genius—of the dime novel. Back in 1860 he launched the thin books with their yellow backs and exciting, blackwood-cuts. In four years he had sold five million of them, the kingpin of the lot being Edward Ellis' story of Seth Jones' adventures in the New York wilderness in the year of 1785. This sold 450,000 copies. Another favorite was Mrs. Victor's "Maum Guinea," a story of slavery which Abraham Lincoln preferred to Uncle Tom's Cabin.

Naturally, Beadle had many imitators and soon the land was flooded with this literature in the raw, and to meet competition, each publisher had to go the other one better in the slaughter of Indians, in the vileness of villains and in the virtue of heroes and heroines.

There was money in it, too, for such writers as Thomas C. Harbough, who died recently in Ohio. He had only six months' schooling, but beginning to write at 19, he turned out 1,000 thrillers at $250 each—5,000,000 words in all, the equivalent of about 80 modern novels.

Imagination ran riot the dime novel writers, predicting practically every invention that was to come after them. For instance, it is only within the past two years or so, that Sir Hubert Wilkins essayed to explore the polar regions in a submarine. Well, back on January 14, 1893, Lou Severance's young hero, Frank Reade, Jr., was up there in an undersea boat, driven by electricity and he found that the North Pole was fixed on a great rock under the ocean.

However, to judge by my own woodshed days, these highly imaginative tales ran only a poor second to the things which were going on in the wild and wooly West, which we took as gospel truth from the pens of the dime novelists. The doings, for example, of Deadwook Dick, told in 64 thrillers by Edward L. Wheeler.

Deadwood Dick Died in 1930

THERE was a man for you! In beaded buckskin and long curls he rode the range, drove the stage, protected the weak, thwarted the road agents, killed bad Indians and bad whites and had, as his companion, Calamity Jane, a female, whose feats with a six-shooter and a poker deck are legendary. It is some of these books that Valta Parma, director of the rare book room of the Congressional Library, has rescued from a furnace and saved for posterity.

The real Deadwood Dick was Richard W. Clark, born in Hansborough, England, on December 15, 1845. Coming to America at the age of 16, he drifted west from Illinois, heading for the gold diggings in the Black Hills and barely escaping the fate of Custer at Little Big Horn. Frontiersman, prospector, Indian scout and stage coach guide, he was a picturesque figure in his blond, long curls and the beaded buckskin.
